TRIBUTE IS PAID TO MOTHERS AT UNKNOWN TOMB

Secretary of War Orator at Ceremonies Held in Arlington.

RECALLS SACRIFICES IN GREAT CONFLICT

Declares Soldiers Faced Duty Bravely Because of Home Training.

MANY SOCIETIES JOIN PATRIOTIC EXERCISES

Mrs. Spence and Mrs. Dale Greet Pilgrims to Virginia Shrine.

Around the tomb of the Unknown Soldier representatives from more than a score of patriotic organizations from every section of the Nation joined with a large assemblage yesterday afternoon in paying tribute to America's World War dead in impresive exercises commemorating Mother's Day.

An atmosphere of reverential sadness pervaded the ceremonies, which opened with an assembly in the Amphitheater of Arlington Cemetery, addressed by Secretary of War James W. Good, and concluded with the banking of multicolored flower wreaths in profusion atop the simple marble slab marking the Nation's shrine in honor of those who "went West."

The event proved the most pretentious public services in Washington's observance of Mother's Day, although various other groups and organizations held exercises elsewhere in and near the city.

Good's Tribute to Mothers.

Probably no similar exercises of the American War Mothers and the Congressional Club at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier since the first occasion of the kind five years ago have been presented in a style so impressive.

Immediately after the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" and benediction by Capt. Charles H. Dickens, chief of chaplains, United States Navy, in the amphitheater, representatives of the numerous patriotic groups formed an aisle to the tomb and beneath outstretched flags other members slowly marched to lay their floral offerings on the memorial, while a platoon of soldiers from Fort Myer with rifles at present arms acted as guard of honor.

Secretary Good, in recalling the World War days, eulogized the motherhood of America for its sacrifices in sending sons into the service.

Inspiration Imparted to Soldiers.

"They went to France because what they heard from your lips, what they saw in your eyes, what they felt beating in your mother hearts, commanded them to go. They had the courage to fight to the end because of their trust in you. You taught them that the strength of all government, of whatever form, lay in the last measure in the spirit of the people; upon their love of national institutions; upon their determination to sustain those institutions. The power of your persuasion lay not only in the truth of your teachings but in the boy's conviction that what he heard from you could only be the truth.

"When the guard is changed and the sentries salute the Tomb of the Unknown they salute for the Army, for the Nation, the mother's sacrifice, the mother's love, the mother's patriotism, the mother's struggles to make the boy, the man, the soldier true to all that she cherishes, and her courage that kept him true."

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, former chief of the chemical warfare service, United States Army, in brief remarks also paid tribute to motherhood.

Others Who Took Part.

Welcomes from the American War Mothers were given by Mrs. Thomas Spence, of Milwaukee, Wis., as national president of that organization and general chairman of the event, and by Mrs. Porter H. Dale as president of the Congressional Club. Others who spoke briefly included Capt. Paul V. Collins, Col. Edmund P. Easterbrook, chief of chaplains, U. S. A., who offered the invocation, and Col. James A. Moss, of the United States Flag Association, who led the salute to the flag. Mrs. Lucia R. Maxwell read a poem of her own composition.

The United States Marine Band rendered several selections and also accompanied vocal solos by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia; Mrs. Bertha Custis Johnson, Gertrude Lyons and Herman Fakler.

Engine Trouble at Sea Halts Submarine S-1

Norfolk, Va., May 12 (A.P.).—The submarine S-1 tonight reported to the Hampton Roads naval operating base by radio that she had developed engine trouble and had been forced to anchor at a point several miles northeast of the Virginia Capes.

Naval officers said she was in no danger, but that a naval tug, the Ord, was being sent from Norfolk to stand by her until repairs were made or to take her in tow.

Soldier Killed as Pilot Stalls to Avoid Crash

Sergt. Johnson Dies as Plane, on Way to Ohio Maneuvers, Falls to Ground; Lieut Roath Hurt. Three Men Meet Death in Borrowed Ships.

Little Rock, Ark., May 12 (A.P.).—A staff sergeant was killed, and a pilot was injured critically at the Little Rock airport here today in the crash of a pursuit plane of the third attack squadron of the Army Air Corps.

Staff Sergt. Homer O. Johnson, of San Antonio, Tex., was killed, and Lieut. Clarence K. Roath, of Gabriel, Calif., is in a hospital not expected to live.

Lieut. Roath, the pilot, stalled his ship in an attempt to avoid a collision with two other planes of his flight, and it plunged 100 feet to the ground. Sergt. Johnson lived only 15 minutes after the crash.

The crash occurred in full view of several thousand spectators, who had thronged the field to see the landing and take-off of the squadron numbering 36 ships, which was en route from its base at Fort Crockett, Galveston, Texas, to the Army Air Corps maneuvers at Dayton, Ohio.

Maj. Robert Coker, commandant of the airport, in an official statement, said Lieut. Roath stalled his plane when it appeared it was about to collide with two others which just had taken off. He said the ship was only about 100 feet high and control of it could not be regained.

Uniontown, Pa., May 12 (A.P.).—A score of Army airplanes from Eastern fields on the way to air maneuvers at Dayton, Ohio, put in at Burgess Field today when a severe thunder and wind storm was encountered over this region. The planes were from Boiling Field, Mitchel Field and Langley Field. A number of the ships remained here over night while others later continued the trip to Dayton.

Cumberland, Md., May 12 (A.P.).—Forced back by high winds and storms over the Cumberland Mountains near Cumberland, 21 planes of a squadron of 45 landed here late today, with all indications pointing to their remaining until tomorrow.

Fifteen of the planes, bombers and bimotored ships, are from Langley Field, Va. Three of the planes were mired in the mud and probably will not be able to leave with the rest tomorrow.

The ships were on their way to Dayton, Ohio, where they were to participate in war maneuvers. They are part of a squadron of 45 which were making the trip to Dayton.

Los Angeles, May 12 (A.P.).—Raymond Kettenhofen, 23, an amateur pilot, and his brother Gordon Kettenhofen, 36, were killed in the crash of a borrowed airplane in a windstorm

CANTON BRIBES FOE NOT TO ATTACK CITY

Silver Payment to Besieging Kwangsi Armies Stops Threatened Fight.

POPULACE PANIC ABATES

Canton, China, May 12 (A.P.).—The Kwangsi armies, which advanced on this rich commercial city from three sides, have been bought off. The Cantonese military authorities today announced that an armistice had been arranged and the general looting and confiscation which would have been a consequence of capture seemed to be averted. The panic of the populace, which already had been under fire, was measurably lessened.

Although details of the settlement were not revealed it appeared to be another instance of silver coin being substituted for lead bullets in Chinese warfare. The Kwangsi leaders virtually dictated the terms for the positions their armies occupied and made capture of the city a foregone conclusion.

It was understood that the Kwangtung government agreed to pay $570,000 Mexican monthly for an indefinite period, to supply additional military supplies and also a large body of troops for patrol duties subject to the command of the Kwangsi clique.

It also was reported that the Cantonese had agreed to allow the Kwangsi leaders to resume their alleged opium trade down the West River, which the Cantonese recently interrupted by confiscating opium shipments passing through the city.

Another reported demand, which was understood to have been granted, was the removal of the civil governor of Kwangtung and the chiefs of the Cantonese army and navy. The advance of the Kwangsi soldiers had halted today and political differences between the two provinces appeared to be at an end, although for how long was another question. The Central Bank of Canton reopened and its notes rose in value to within 75 per cent of par.

50 Catholic Women Sent to Penal Colony

Manzanillo, Colima, Mexico, May 12 (N.Y.W.U.S.).—Fifty Catholic women including Mother Superior Maria Concepcion Acevedo y de la Llata, convicted as the "intellectual author" of the assassination of President-elect Gen. Alvaro Obregon, and sixteen other nuns, sailed from here today on the transport Progresso for the penal colony on Islas Marias. The charge against them was the dissemination of seditious propaganda.

DR. SCHACHT WARNS GERMAN INDUSTRIES

Leaders Told of Danger in Breakdown of Experts Debts Parley.

EFFECT ON LOANS SEEN

Essen, Germany, May 12 (A.P.).—Some friends of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht consider his hurried visit here from Paris over the week-end as a stroke of genius in shifting responsibility for Germany's further course on the reparations negotiations to the industrialists of the Ruhr Valley and the Rhineland.

The purpose of his trip was interpreted as nothing less than an attempt to have directors of the Krupp and Thyssen interests and other captains of industry to agree to swallow whatever final concession he may deem essential and unavoidable at Paris to prevent disbanding of the experts' conference without results.

It is understood that Dr. Schacht, supported by his fellow-expert, Dr. Voegler, laid before some 20 of the leading industrialists the consequences to industry and business if the discount rate is further raised, which he represented as inevitable if no agreement is reached at Paris.

He also was understood to have pointed out that foreign loans would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, in event of failure of the conference. The essence of his plea was reported to be whether the leaders of the great industries were prepared to take responsibility for a possible financial catastrophe or would consider it a lesser evil to have the German experts make further concessions which would insure agreement on reparations and the consequent stabilization of economic conditions generally.

The results of these conversations will doubtless be reflected in the next move by Dr. Schacht at Paris, for it may be taken for granted he now has assurance in advance of support of the leading German industrialists.

Paris, May 12 (A.P.).—Today ushered in the fourteenth week of the conference of international experts on revision of German reparations and the general opinion in the conference circles was that whatever the outcome it would be the final week.

The conference hinges on two immediate points. The first is whether the German conditions to the proposal of Chairman Owen D. Young will be accepted by the allies. The second, which at present is held in abeyance, is whether the allied creditors can agree

WHALEN LISTS NOTABLES FOR WAR ON CRIME

17 Prominent Citizens of New York Named to Advise Him.

MANY WALKS OF LIFE GET REPRESENTATION

G. O. P. Official's Attack Is Branded Political Propaganda.

BULLOCK CALLS CITY SAFE MURDER FIELD

Cites Statistics Showing That First-Degree Convictions Are Exceptional.

New York, May 12 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Police Commissioner Whalen announced today that he had completed the formation of his long-heralded citizens' committee "composed of business men, bankers and social workers to cooperate and counsel with him on crime-prevention problems."

The announcement of the persons who will compose the committee was made before Commissioner Whalen had learned of a statement issued by William Bullock, director of the city affairs bureau of the Republican county committee, to the effect that murders in New York City are on the increase under the Whalen administration, with the guilty running only a slight risk of punishment. When he was informed of Mr. Bullock's statement, Commissioner Whalen immediately branded it a piece of "political propaganda."

The list of persons who will form the citizens' committee contains the following names:

Personnel of Committee.

Lady Armstrong, chairman Catholic Big Sisters.

Jules S. Bache, banker, treasurer Florence Crittenton League and benefactor to agencies interested in problems of boys and girls.

Mrs. Sidney Borg, president of New York State Conference on Social Work and vice president of Jewish Board of Guardians.

William Lewis Butchers, boys' welfare director, New York Children's Aid Society; chairman of committee on causes, New York State Crime Commission.

W. Bruce Cobb, former magistrate, secretary of criminal courts committee, Brooklyn Bureau of Charities.

Edwin J. Cooley, chief probation officer, court of general sessions; professor criminology at Fordham University.

Edmond Guggenheim, industrialist.

Jane M. Hoey, assistant director, welfare council of New York City, member of New York State Crime Commission and State Board of Correction.

Group "Purely Advisory."

William Edwin Hall, attorney and industrial leader; formerly director of Boys' Working Reserve with United States Government during the war and president of the Boys' Club Federation.

August Heckscher, founder of the Heckscher Foundation and interested in better housing and in spare time and recreational opportunities for the youth.

Edward F. Hutton, banker, leader in social welfare work.

Philip Le Boutillier, president, Best & Co.

Mrs. Willard Parker, jr., chairman, Protestant Big Sister.

John J. Raskob, capitalist.

The Rev. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle.

Thomas S. Rice, special writer for Brooklyn Daily Eagle, member of police committee, New York State Crime Commission.

George E. Worthington, counsel for the Committee of Fourteen.

The commissioner said the committee was purely advisory and would report to him from time to time. He said the problem of crime and the criminal is a question that concerns not only public officials but every member of the community.

Bullock Cites Statistics.

"Crime today is a problem of youth," the commissioner said. "About 50 per cent of the criminals who commit serious crimes are under 21 years of age, and about two-thirds are under 25. Of course, the police department must concern itself primarily with the detection and arrest of those who violate the law, but it seems to me that it also has a responsibility and an opportunity to do more than this."

The statement made today by Mr. Bullock was based upon figures and court records, Mr. Bullock said. He said that during the first three complete months of the Whalen administration there were 80 murders in the city, as compared with 71 for the corresponding period last year.

"The official records show," Mr. Bullock's statement said, "that out of more than 300 murders last year there were only seven convictions for murder in the first degree.

"Only one first degree conviction has been obtained throughout the city in the first three months of the year. This was in Manhattan. The record is that in fifteen months ended March 31 there has been a total of nearly 400 murders, with first degree convictions in just 6 cases."

TORIES EXTEND INSURANCE IDEA TO MATERNITY

Baldwin's Party Adds to Present Scheme of Social Aids.

VOTERS GIVEN PLAN ON EVE OF ELECTION

No Conservative Group in England, Judged by U. S. Concepts.

PENSIONS TO WIDOWS ALREADY UPON BOOKS

Better Schools, Relief From Local Taxes Are Among Platform Planks.

By RAYMOND GRAM SWING.

London, May 12.—Judged by American concepts, there is no Conservative party in Great Britain.

The party led by Mr. Baldwin is not conservative in the American meaning of the word. It is the party which for four years has administered the widest social insurance scheme in the world, and has added to it the formidable feature of widow's pensions.

Now it is going to the country pledged to add cash maternity benefits.

Wealth Is Chief Issue.

In a democracy where poverty is extreme and where the great majority are sure to be poor the rest of their lives, it is only natural that politics should be more concerned with the redistribution of wealth than with any other single issue. No party could survive which did not propose some measure of redistribution.

The elementary difference between parties is as to ways and means and speed.

Socialism would redistribute rapidly by laying heavy taxes on the rich and ultimately by nationalizing industry and credit.

Liberals would redistribute less rapidly, but they believe in state insurance, they initiated it.

Insurance Extended.

Conservatives, who twenty years ago fought state insurance almost to the point of threatening civil war, now are converted to it and are extending it.

No Conservative leader expresses the change of the times more than Stanley Baldwin, and none has given more democratic voice to the forward-looking outlook of British conservatives than he.

He is the spokesman of positivism. He acknowledges that things must be done, reform must be instituted. Let conservatism do this temperately, wisely, even cautiously, so that change will work as little havoc as possible. That sums up his style in politics. Make few promises, fulfill those made; but do something.

England considers Baldwin a straightforward, honest man. He does not talk bunk at election times. He does not try to wring a specious hope out of temporary situation. And in laying down the Tory program for this election he has lived up to his reputation. Granted that the country is interested chiefly in unemployment and the state

Slayer of Planter Shot Down by Mob

Mississippian Is Stabbed to Death in Wrangle; Action Swift.

Macon, Miss., May 12 (A.P.).—Steve Jenkins, 65, negro, was shot to death by a mob near here last night immediately after he had stabbed and killed Fred McCrayber, 35, a planter. Officers said McCrayber and Jenkins had disagreed over the terms of a share crop contract.

The story told by McCrayber's neighbors was that Jenkins became dissatisfied with his contract and left McCrayber's plantation. McCrayber went after him, and a fight began when the two met near Macon last night.

McCrayber was stabbed repeatedly with a long-bladed "switch-knife," three blows striking the heart. A mob formed quickly and captured and killed Jenkins before officers arrived. The planter is survived by a widow and two children.

Mother's Day Is Cloak For Raids by Outlaws

New York, May 12 (U.P.).—Simulating dutiful sons buying flowers and candy for Mother's Day, three bandits held up two floral shops and a confectionery store today and walked out with more than $600.

After taking $118 from Morris Levinsky, confectioner, and $150 from Nicholas Durkas, one of the florists, the bandits called on Thomas Kefas in a small shop on upper Broadway and asked to see a small potted plant. As the proprietor stooped to pick it up, they knocked him unconscious and rifled the cash register for $380.

Howard, British Envoy, To Become Bookbinder

Sir Esme Tells Students Ability to Create Is Real Content.

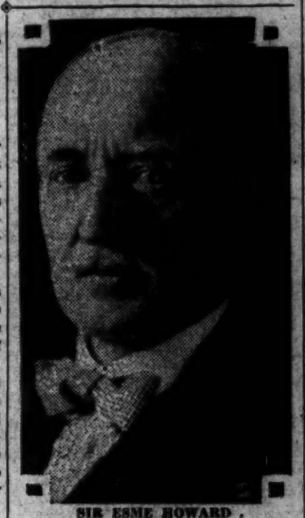
Princeton, N. J., May 12 (U.P.).—Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador at Washington, on his retirement from the diplomatic service next year, plans to devote much of his time to bookbinding, he said in an address here tonight to the literary and political societies of Princeton University.

The ambassador was discussing ways of attaining happiness and declared the ability to create, even in an humble way, was one of the greatest sources of satisfaction and contentment.

"You young people of America and also our young people in England can add much to your own happiness and also the happiness of the world generally if you will learn not only to appreciate beautiful things but also to create them within the measure of your capacity.

"There is nothing—apart from the ever-important cultivation of the spiritual values—which your country and my country need so much as the cultivation of the esthetic values.

"Unfortunately for myself, I may say that I never learned any handicraft and that source of creative happiness is at present denied to me. But I hope to make good this defect when I retire from diplomatic life next year and to become perhaps an enthusiastic, if belated, bookbinder. I should like to think I had persuaded one or two of you here present to try your hand at such humble work and so assure to yourselves many happy hours."



SIR ESME HOWARD.

TEN DEAD IN CRASHES OF BUSES AND AUTOS

Wreck in Michigan Fatal to Five; Car Riders Die by Fire and Water.

5 GIRLS' SKULLS BROKEN

Monroe, Mich., May 12 (A.P.).—Four passengers were killed almost instantly, another died from injuries and ten others are in a hospital here as the result of a bus-truck collision 5 miles south of here early today.

The bus was bound from Toledo to Detroit.

The dead are:

Frank Cinderich, 21, Trenton, Mich.
H. Westerman, 40, Chicago.
Mrs. Emma Mauereteau, 66, Los Angeles.
An unidentified girl about 16 years old.
An unidentified man about 42 years old, who had a Grand Hotel, of Cleveland, card in his pocket.

The bus, county officials declare, crashed into a truck loaded with automobile tires which was parked along the road while the driver, it is understood by County Prosecutor McAran, was making repairs.

E. D. Waring, 26, of Cleveland, driver of the bus, declared that he was blinded by lights from an approaching automobile and did not see the truck until it was too late to avoid the crash. Both Waring and Godfried, 30, of Detroit, driver of the truck, are held in the Monroe County Jail pending an investigation which has been launched by George A. Huber, coroner of Monroe County.

Waring was slightly injured when he was thrown through a window of the bus. The bus was covered with canvas and taken to Detroit. The dead were removed to Coroner Huber's morgue at Monroe, the injured to the Monroe Hospital and the other passengers were taken to Detroit in another bus.

The truck belonged to Motor Freight, Inc., of Akron.

Canton, Onio, May 12 (A.P.).—Three members of a family were killed and three others critically injured as the result of a collision between their automobile and a Pennsylvania passenger train early today. The dead are: Louis Gary Moses, 26, his wife, Ruth, 24, and their daughter, Mary Agnes Moses, 5, all of Massillon.

Two of the Moses' children, Raymond, 7 and James, 4, and Carl Townsend, 39, of Canton, driver of the car, suffered internal and head injuries, which may prove fatal.

Newark, N. J., May 12 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Fire breaking out in the wreckage of two automobiles which crashed this afternoon on the elevated highway near the Newark airport burned to death a woman and her pet dog. Three other

NAVAL OFFICER KILLS HIMSELF IN HOSPITAL

R. H. Gifford, 36, Cuts Throat With Razor in Front of Attendant.

HAD PHYSICAL COLLAPSE

Lieut. Comdr. Richard H. Gifford, U. S. N., 36 years old, a resident of Washington and formerly stationed at Jersey City, ended his life at noon yesterday in a ward at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, by cutting his throat with a safety razor blade.

Gifford died in view of an attendant, who has been with him constantly since an attempt at suicide on March 16 at the Naval Hospital. He was removed to St. Elizabeth's March 18. As the attendant looked on, Gifford walked to the window of the room and suddenly slashed his throat with the razor blade.

Dr. H. C. Wooley, assistant superintendent of the hospital, said there was no chance for the attendant to prevent the act. It had been reported to police that Gifford overpowered an attendant before cutting his throat.

Hospital officials were unable to state where the victim had obtained the razor blade but pointed out that the small piece of metal could easily have been concealed. Coroner Ramsey Nevitt viewed the body yesterday afternoon and declared he would issue a certificate of death by suicide.

Gifford, previous to a complete physical breakdown early this year, had been a popular member of the younger naval set. He was regarded as a brilliant young officer and a number of high ranking Navy officials called at St. Elizabeth's yesterday after they had been notified of the tragedy.

The widow of the young officer and one son survive. They have been living at Indian Head, Md. Gifford previously had maintained a home on Kalorama road in Washington. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Family of Eight Tossed From Beds by Bomb

Chicago, May 12 (U.P.).—Joseph Fasone, his wife and six children were thrown from their beds and other residents in the neighborhood were aroused when a bomb destroyed a hallway in a two-story frame house here today.

Fasone said he knew of no reason for the attack.

Gunman, Who Menaces Driver in Crash, Seized

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Frank McErlane, notorious gunman, was arrested today after his automobile crashed into another car and he threatened the driver with a pistol. The police found three pistols in McErlane's automobile.

COLLEGE HEAD IN RIOTS BEATS MORAL CHARGE

T. T. Shields, Iowa Baptist Leader, Stood Trial Before Trustees.

INTIMACIES WITH HIS SECRETARY ALLEGED

Student Uprising Followed Acquittal by Board Which He Headed.

MOB MEANT MURDER, SAYS MAN WHO FLEES

Institution May Be Kept Open by Injunction to Protect Credits of Semester.

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Charges of moral turpitude, involving Dr. T. T. Shields, president of the board of trustees of Des Moines University, and Miss Edith Rebman, secretary, were heard by the university trustees at Des Moines last week, the Rev. Isaac Page, of Chicago, a member of the board, revealed here tonight.

Dr. Shields, president of the Baptist Bible Union, and one of the most prominent leaders of the church in the United States, is about 60 years old. Miss Rebman is 40.

Both denied the charges, according to Mr. Page and the trustees indorsed their denial completely.

At the same time the board ousted Dr. Harry Wayman, president of the school, and his entire faculty, who were accused of modernistic leanings.

Students Accused Leader.

"We heard rumors of these charges, and so we considered it best to call a special meeting to hear them as fully as possible," Mr. Page said. "We went into session Friday and we completed our investigation Saturday.

"Three students volunteered to testify. They produced the register of a Waterloo, Iowa, hotel, showing that Dr. Shields and Miss Rebman had registered there and had been assigned a suite. A photograph was produced showing the interior of this suite, with the connecting door open. But bear in mind that the rooms were unoccupied when the photograph was made.

"The students' testimony failed dementably under cross-examination. For instance, one testified he saw Dr. Shields visit Miss Rebman's apartment at 7 o'clock in the evening, carrying a black bag; another fixed the time at 9 o'clock and said the bag was brown, and so forth.

Fraternities Called Issue.

"I think one cause of the agitation against Dr. Shields was that, shortly after the Baptist Bible Union of North America took over the school, the trustees ordered fraternities abolished, effective in June of this year.

"We found there had been woeful lack of discipline on the campus and lack of cooperation on the part of some members of the faculty. We decided the best interests of the school would be served by dismissing the entire faculty. Those who wish reinstatement may apply for it June 4."

As soon as the board's action in dismissing President Wayman and his associate professors became known, students at the school staged a protest riot.

Bent on Murder, Says Shields.

Toronto, Ontario, May 12 (A.P.).—The Rev. Dr. T. Shields, on arrival here tonight, said "a wide conspiracy" laid with "devilish ingenuity" caused factional trouble at Des Moines University, where he is president of the board of trustees.

Dr. Shields was met at the station by his wife and several hundred members of Jarvis Street Baptist Church, of which he is pastor. The crowd cheered and clapped.

When questioned with regard to the trouble at the university, Dr. Shields expressed deep regret. He said he was amazed at the fury of the mob that stormed the building where the board

Cooper Advocates Abolition Of Little Red Schoolhouse

Would Replace It With Complete Rural Unit of Education.

(United Press.)

Abolition of the "little red schoolhouse" and its replacement by competently staffed rural institutions was advocated yesterday by William J. Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education. He suggested a complete survey by States of their existing systems of instruction.

Cooper's statement followed closely one by Secretary of Interior Wilbur denying the necessity of a Federal department of education. Wilbur said the function of Washington in the American educational system was to of trustees was assembled. "They were bent on murder," he said.

He blamed the trouble on dissatisfaction of long standing in some quarters of the university. The university, was, he said, a modernist institution until the reorganization. A faction in the university resented changes which had been made, "and they have been our enemies ever since. "This trouble was accentuated by resentment among a section of the students over orders abolishing fraternities and sororities."

Injunction to Be Sought.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 12 (U.P.).—Students of Des Moines University, fearing the rioting which followed dismissal of President H. C Wayman and the faculty would cause them to lose their semester's credits, prepared tonight to institute injunction proceedings to prevent closing of the school.

Dr. T. T. Shields, director of the board, whose action in asking the dismissal of the faculty, caused rioting among the student body in which eggs and rocks were thrown through windows of the administration building, ordered the university closed indefinitely.

The order was issued just before he boarded a train for the East to present the case before the National Baptist Convention, meeting at Buffalo, N. Y., next Tuesday.

Shields Upheld by Board.

Dr. Shields, whose name was cleared of immorality charges involving Miss Edith Rebman, secretary of the board of trustees, was upheld by the board in his demand for the resignation of the faculty. His action was the climax to a two-years' controversy between fundamentalists and modernists at the university, Dr. Shields being a fundamentalist leader.

At unofficial gatherings tonight five students were named to file the injunction petition, which would seek to restrain the board of trustees from ousting President Wayman. The petition will be filed tomorrow morning, the United Press was informed.

Fear for the safety of their semester credits was said to have prompted the students' injunction movement, which, it was said, was supported by practically the entire student body.

May Reopen Tomorrow.

The school will not reopen Monday, Dr. Wayman, president, said today, although plans will be made to open Tuesday.

Twenty-three students were arrested during the rioting Saturday night and taken to the city jail. They were released later.

The board of trustees was in the midst of its session when a deluge of rotton eggs and stones crashed through the windows. Outside, the board members could hear the cries of the students: "Let's get Shields." About twenty windows in the administration building were broken before police arrived and the student mob was dispersed temporarily. Dr. Shields and Miss Rebman were escorted under police guard to headquarters to prevent violence.

At the railroad station, in spite of police reserves, students congregated about the train, broke through the lines and searched Pullman coaches. After 23 of the mob were arrested, Shields was taken aboard the train under police guard.

The arrested students were released after the train departed. Feeling on the campus was high today, but students did not allow it to interfere with their customary church attendance in the chapel. The odor of decayed eggs pervaded chapel rooms, but communion service, with Dr. Wayman officiating, was held without interruption.

Arizona Forest Blaze Brought Under Control

Nogales, Ariz., May 12 (A.P.).—A bulletin issued by A. S. Wingo, chief forest ranger of this district, said the fire which raged four days in the mountains here was brought under control today.

High humidity and a change of wind aided the forces of fire fighters to overcome the blaze after it had laid waste 15,000 acres of timber and grazing lands. The blaze was halted within a few miles of Harshaw, a mining town.

Man Under Arrest Is Injured.

William Henry Bowers, 42 years old, 1416 R street northwest, a prisoner at the Second Precinct on a charge of intoxication, last night was injured when he fell from his cot in his cell, striking the floor. He was treated at Sibley Hospital by Dr. G. H. McLane for lacerations to his scalp and a broken left elbow.

POLICEMAN GIVEN LEAVE

Bristol, Va., May 12 (A.P.).—Deputy Sheriff James Crowe, one of three Washington County, Va., officers charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of J. W. Kendrick, 17, Emory and Henry College freshman, last Monday night, was reported this afternoon to be "seriously ill" from "nervous prostration and a heart ailment" at his residence near Glade Springs, Va.

The case of the three officers will go before the Washington County grand jury two weeks hence. They are at liberty under $5,000 bond each. None has been suspended, it was learned today; but James McReynolds, Abingdon city policeman, asked and received an indefinite leave of absence following the shooting.

Kendrick was riding in an automobile with Paul Phelps and Sterling Dutton, both of Meadowview, Crowe, McReynolds and J. H. Worley, the other officer, said they had "information" that Dutton and Phelps were drunk and disorderly. Shots were fired at the machine in which the three youths were riding, one bullet striking Kendrick and fatally wounding him. The shooting occurred Monday midnight and Kendrick died Tuesday night at 9 o'clock.

The officers were not arrested until Thursday when E. M. Kendrick, uncle of the slain boy swore out warrants.

Emory and Henry students have petitioned Gov. Byrd to "see that justice is served" in the case.

Gen. Calles Returns To Mexican Capital

Victor in Field Over Rebel Forces Is Cheered by Throngs.

Mexico City, May 12 (U.P.).—Gen. E. Plutarco Calles, former president and veteran military leader, who became minister of war at the outbreak of the March 4 rebellion, returned to the capital today and was hailed by the populace and government.

Calles answered the government's call at the start of the rebellion, returning from private life to assume command of the republic's military forces and later to take the leadership in the field. Under his guidance the rebellion was crushed, although not without bloody fighting. It is reported that Calles will return to private life shortly.

Provisional President Emilio Portes Gil, former Minister of War Joaquin Amaro, who was replaced by Calles because of illness, 25 army generals and several cabinet members were at the station today to meet the minister of war. Several thousand persons cheered Calles as he left the train.

Calles and his staff drove immediately to Chapultepec Castle to confer with the president.

Noted American Painter Of Landscapes Is Dead

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—Birge Harrison, widely known American landscape artist, died today at his home in Woodstock, N. Y. He was 73 years old.

Mr. Harrison was chiefly known for his winter landscapes and his paintings of city streets. His work is to be found in many leading galleries, including the Luxembourg, in Paris, and museums in Marseilles, Philadelphia, Chicago, Washington, St. Louis, Indianapolis, St. Paul, Detroit, Nashville, Lincoln, Nebr.; Atlanta and Toledo. He was born in Philadelphia. He began his career in the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. In 1875 he went with Sargent to Paris, where he studied figure painting under Cabanel.

Swiss Voters Bury Dry Law Proposal

All of 24 Cantons Reject Suggested Permissive Local Option Act.

Geneva, May 12 (A.P.).—Prohibition in the United States has not inspired the Swiss to follow its example. Today the inhabitants of the Swiss Confederation delivered a crushing defeat to an initiative bill which was not to establish general prohibition, but merely to authorize local option as to whether sale of hard liquors should be permitted.

Every one of the 24 cantons rejected the measure by an overwhelming majority and the total vote was impressively negative. The initiative, if it had been accepted, would have given cities and towns the right to vote on whether liquors containing a heavy percentage of alcohol should be allowed to be sold in their precincts. Beers and wines would not have been affected.

Temperance organizations had waged a strong campaign for aceptance of the law on the ground that the Swiss people were ruining their health by too great consumption of strong liquor.

Wirth, Auto Racer, Hits Rail; Is Killed

Death Comes Near End of Contest; Stewart Is Injured in Crash.

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—Harry Wirth, of Flushing, N. Y., dirt track automobile racer, was killed at the Deer Park speedway today. Competing in a 6-mile race, Wirth lost control of his car with only a few more laps to go. His car struck the hub rail along the grandstand and overturned twice. Wirth's neck was broken. He died as he was being removed to a hospital.

Langhorne, Pa., May 12 (A.P.).—Al Stewart, automobile racer, was injured severely at the dirt track here today when his car collided with another in the last race on the program. Stewart was hurled from car when it struck one driven by Morris Berman. The unpiloted car then went through a fence and was wrecked.

Stewart was taken to a hospital in Trenton, N. J., where his condition was said to be serious. He was hurt internally and may lose an eye. Berman was not hurt.

Showers Will Follow Yesterday's 86 Degrees

The summer-like weather yesterday, which pushed the thermometer to 86 degrees yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, will be missing for the next few days, according to the weather forecaster, who last night predicted showers for today or tomorrow.

Despite the fact that many of the thousands of persons who took advantage of the brilliant sunshine to stay out-of-doors yesterday complained of the heat, weather bureau officials said the high temperature yesterday was not unusual for this time in the year.

Second-Division Group Will Convene Tonight

The Second Division Association of the District of Columbia will meet tonight at the Marine Barracks, Eighth and I streets southeast, in the band auditorium.

Maj. Gen. Wendell C. Neville, commandant of the Marine Corps, will make an address of welcome and Commander Joel T. Boone, surgeon to the President and head of the local branch of the Second Division Association, will preside. I. Kaufman, vice president, will assist the presiding officer. The United States Marine Band will play.

Counterfeit Plot Laid To Four Men in Toils

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Four men, trailed as they left a string of counterfeit bills in several West Side stotres, were arrested today by city and Federal operatives, who believe that the men were members of a band that has been flooding the city for two months with bogus $5, $10 and $20 bills.

Those arrested gave their names as Anthony Falkner, 32 years old; Anthony Sallucco, 29; Vincent Sallucco, 25, and Barthomo de Felice, 38. They were held on technical charges while officers were attempting to round up the rest of the gang.

Lindbergh Rescues Planeless Comrade

Lends His Swift Falcon to Earth-Bound Pilot for Flight Here.

New York, May 12 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A couple of the boys, who work in the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, did a nice bit of cooperating today.

Lieut. "Jimmy" Doolittle, Army speed pilot and one-time winner of the Schneider trophy race, who is now engaged in fog-flying experiments for the fund, found himself without a plane for a necessary flight to Washington. Mitchel Field, where Lieut. Doolittle is stationed, was unable to help him out because everything except a few slow training planes had been sent to Dayton to participate in the coming Ohio war games. Jimmy indulged in some serious thinking.

"Let me see," he mused, "there's a fellow named Lindbergh works for the fund; director or something like that. Has a ship, too, a nice fast Falcon. Maybe he would help me out."

Lindbergh happened to be calling on his fiancee but Jimmy reads the newspapers and got him on the telephone after only one wrong number.

"I have nothing to say," said Lindberg, through force of habit. "I mean—that is—of course, you can have the ship. Go right over and get it out of the hangar at Roosevelt Field."

Doolittle did and tomorrow morning he will fly it to Washington.

Wife's Plea for Money Brings Beating, Report

Badly beaten about the face and head in an altercation yesterday afternoon with her husband, Mrs. Florence Goldberg, 23 years old, of 2335 Champlain street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital by Dr. Leon Gordon, according to police report.

Mrs. Goldberg told police of the Eighth Precinct her husband, George Goldberg, 32 years old, struck her at her home when he became angry because she asked for money to take the children for a taxicab ride.

LIFE THREATENED, HOWARD ASSERTS

Dry Reformer Wants to Show Cartridge, but Is Unable to Find It.

SAYS WOMEN PURSUE HIM

Clinton N. Howard, advertised as "The Little Giant of the American Platform," who has been conducting a campaign to dry up Washington since the first of the year, told a mass meeting at the Centennial Baptist Church last night that an attempt had been made on his life since he gave "to the Police Department" 400 names of places where vice and gambling flourish."

After making the statement Howard felt in his pockets, explaining that he wanted to exhibit the cartridge which was to have taken his life. He could not find it, but explained that the cartridge had been found in a local church after a man, presumably a bootlegger, had confronted him. He said the man was hustled out of the building before he could fire and dropped the cartridge, which Howard's "undercover man" recovered. He described the cartridge as "a .42-caliber."

When questioned by reporters as to details concerning the alleged attempt on his life, Howard refused to divulge additional information.

Howard also told the mass meeting that "women have attempted to get me into a compromising position at my hotel."

Commercial Radio To Coast Is Ready

New York-to-San Francisco Line Opens Wednesday in New System.

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—R. C. A. Communications, Inc., announced today that it will open its New York-San Francisco commercial radio telegraph circuit Wednesday as the first step in a projected Nation-wide system.

The service, which includes photo-radio transmission, as well as messages, will operate between San Francisco and New York, Boston and Washington. An application in behalf of R. C. A. Communications is pending before the Federal Radio Commission for short-wave frequencies sufficient to serve 30 cities in an inland network.

The New York-San Francisco system will bridge the continent without a relay. The transmitting and receiving stations represent a capital outlay of more than $500,000.

Labor Party Is Routed In Australia Election

Brisbane, Australia, May 12 (A.P.).—The general election for the Queensland legislative assembly yesterday resulted in a crushing defeat for the Labor government, which had held office for fourteen years. Before the election the Laborites had 43 seats and the Nationalists 29. The new figures give the Nationalists 44, Labor 26 and Independents 2. The speaker of the house was defeated as well as three and possibly four ministers.

The prime factor in the election was the Nationalists' scheme to cure unemployment in the state. For the first time in Queensland a woman was elected.

Mothers Take Up Fight Of Children; One Dead

Minneapolis, May 12 (A.P.).—A coaster wagon over which their children quarreled got two neighbor women into a hair-pulling fight in Northeast Minneapolis late yesterday and resulted in the death of one from a blow on the head.

The dead woman was Mrs. Irene M. Whyte, 24, wife of Malcolm Whyte, Police and Dr. G. W. Callerstrom, deputy coroner, questioned her neighbor, Mrs. Mary Mika, 25, wife of Raymond Mika. Malcolm Whyte, husband of the dead woman, said he would demand a police investigation.

Porter of Fashionable Hotel Killed by Blow

Greenwich, Conn., May 12 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The body of James J. O'Connell, 40, porter at the Maples, a fashionable hotel just off the Boston road, was found early this morning in a rear doorway by Michael Wentziel, watchman.

The man's skull had been fractured. Police are investigating.

MARYLAND CRASHES SEND 11 TO HOSPITAL

Several Washington Residents Victims of Accidents in Sunday Traffic.

POLICEMAN IS INJURED

Maryland police were kept busy yesterday with a series of accidents, in in which eleven persons were injured, one of the victims being a Montgomery County policeman who was investigating an accident. A rum chase followed one of the accidents.

A youthful Washington couple were injured, the wife seriously, when their automobile skidded on Defense highway, 5 miles past Bladensburg, Md., and crashed into a bridge. Marcel Hauchart, 24 years old, was the driver. He suffered a slight laceration of his left leg. The wife, Mrs. Florence Hauchart, 20 years old, sustained lacerations on the head and face and is believed to have a fractured skull. The couple live at 1466 Columbia road northwest.

Montgomery County Policemen Joseph Nolte and George C. Windham were participants in a wild chase after an alleged rum car which crashed into an automobile at Four Corners, on the Colesville pike.

As the car approached the intersection the driver saw the policeman and became alarmed. He swerved his car and was headed broadside into the car of George Winerick, 1229 Harvard street northwest. Winerick managed to swerve approximately 60 miles an hour. Finally the police were outdistanced and the rum car escaped.

The rum car turned off down a dirt side road which leads to Prince Georges County. The police car started in pursuit. The chase continued for several miles over the rough-surfaced road at approximately 60 miles an hour. Finally the police were outdistanced and the rum car escaped.

While on his way to investigate an accident between the car of Roland Whitehurst, manager of the Electric Storage Battery Co., who lives at 4100 Military road, Chevy Chase, D. C., and a car listed to Thomas H. Creighton, jr., a lawyer, of 5402 Connecticut avenue northwest, last night Montgomery County Policeman Joseph Oldfield was struck and knocked down by a passing auto.

The policeman was taken to Georgetown Hospital, where his condition was declared not serious. Mr. Whitehurst, his wife, and two children, Theodore, 8 years old, and Kenneth, 5, were cut and bruised in the accident. The two cars sideswiped, Mr. Whitehurst told police, and the Creighton car turned over on its side. He helped pull four or five persons from the Creighton car and placed them in a passing auto to go to a hospital, he reported, but did not get their names.

The Creighton car was driven by Joseph F. Roca, of the Colonial Hotel, it later was reported to Bethesda police. Creighton was cut on the head, but not seriously injured. Miss D. Gornell and Miss M. Monachino, of 2700 Connecticut avenue northwest, accompanied the Creighton party.

Officer Oldfield was brought to the hospital by George A. Rowe, 4841 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Oldfield was about a half mile from the accident when he attempted to pass a car driven by Capt. Ford I. Rogers, U. S. M. C., attached to Marine headquarters, Washington. A second car driven by Hector O'Connor, 918 Eighteenth street northwest, also attempted to pass the Rogers car, police say.

Oldfield's motor cycle skidded and he was thrown under the wheels of the Rogers car. Capt. Rogers was driving so slow that he was able to stop his car before it ran over the policeman. Rogers and O'Connor were charged with reckless driving and released. Rogers on his personal bond and O'Connor on $17.50 collateral. Oldfield's foot was injured and he was cut and bruised.

Two persons were arrested following an accident at Colesville between an auto driven by Miss Mary B. Gardner, 1733 Q street northwest, who was making a left turn, and a car driven by George McDonough, of Baltimore. McDonough and his wife and Mr. and Mrs. William Eney, also of Baltimore, were bruised and cut when their automobile turned over after the crash.

Sinclair Is Visited By Business Caller

New Yorker Is Only One to Take Advantage of Sunday Privilege at Jail.

(Associated Press.)

Although yesterday was visiting day for Harry F. Sinclair only one caller, a man who gave his name as John Hardy, of New York, took advantage of the privilege accorded to the oil man at the District Jail.

Sinclair refused to see newspaper men. Hardy, who said he was a business associate of the oil man, called at 6:45 p. m. and departed shortly before 8:30. He said the prisoner was feeling well. Saturday Judge Chandler, of Oklahoma, visited Sinclair in company with G. T. Stanford, New York attorney.

DENEEN - M'CORMICK CAMPAIGN TO BE HOT

Senator's Position Strong, but Representative Is Backed by Many.

SHE IS KEEN POLITICIAN

Springfield, Ill., May 12 (A.P.).—Political leaders today predicted one of the warmest senatorial contests in the history of Illinois, following announcement by Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick that she will be candidate for the upper house berth in the 1930 election.

The announcement was contained in a letter last night to Judge William E. Crum, of Springfield, and was interpreted as an answer by Mrs. McCormick to published reports that she would not attempt to wrest the Republican nomination from Senator Charles S. Deneen.

Precinct committeemen in Sangamon County (Springfield) have received communications from Mrs. McCormick enlisting their aid and asking them to submit the names of five Republicans in their precincts to form a McCormick organization.

Mrs. McCormick is an astute campaigner, and in the recent election spoke throughout the State in the interest of her own and Gov. Louis Emmerson's campaigns. Political observers in the State capital believe the governor, as well as Senator Deneen's junior colleague, Otis F. Glenn, and State Treasurer Omer N. Custer will support Mrs. McCormick in the primaries.

Senator Deneen has been a prominent figure in Illinois Republican circles for many years, and it is said his political alignments are set deep enough to make it difficult to dislodge him from the ticket next spring.

30 Reds, With Leader, Are Nabbed in Vienna

Vienna, May 12 (A.P.).—Thirty communists, including the notorious leader, Karl Toman, were arrested today for attempts to throw marching columns of fascist and socialist demonstrators into confusion and resisting the efforts of police. Vienna resembled a huge military camp with large bodies of police held in readiness for possible clashes, but the sight of these perparations, combined with a heavy downfall of rain, dampened the ardor of the demonstrators.

BRITISH TORIES SPONSORING MOTHERS' INSURANCE SCHEME

of trade, Baldwin refuses to be meretricious.

Unemployment, he says, must be cured by improved industry. It is due chiefly to the fall in export trade and in emigration. You can not legislate export trade into existence, you can not finance the emigration of hundreds of thousands. You can do something, train workers, train boys, evolve minor schemes of colonial development. And you can extend safeguarding.

These, he says, the Conservatives have done well and will continue. Avoid cataclysms and the future will take care of itself.

That sums up his unemployment policy. It will not catch many workers' votes. But at any rate, it is sincere.

The Conservative program diverts the voter to think of other and more distant development.

The British public must be educated. The nation bears a vast responsibility, the weight of empire, the weight of civilization. And only one-eighth as many young people here receive higher education as in America.

Now that every one votes, the fundamental idea of old-fashioned conservatism must be scrapped. That idea was government by the ruling class, trained and educated for the purpose. Now the ruling class is the nation.

Many of Baldwin's gray-haired followers do not recognize the fact, but he sees it vividly. You give the vote to every man and woman, then you must provide education for every man and woman.

So Disraeli would have thought, so thinks this modern Disraeli.

Baldwin a Progressive.

Politics, says the old maxim, is the science of the possible. Baldwin in his heart is as progressive as any man in England; where he differs from Liberal and Socialist is in his measure of the possible. He is doing all he thinks can be done. Maternity benefits, better schools (with a hint of nursery schools to come), relief from local taxation for industry, help of a small kind for the farmer, safeguarding all these are possible, in addition to the vast work the state already undertakes. These he promises without qualification. More he refuses to promise.

Will he catch votes? Perhaps not. Anyone who knows Baldwin personally knows he does not care much about vote catching. He does care about being truthful. Once before he lost an election for his party because he refused to be specious about protection, and twist his own pledge so as to stay in power. Now he declines to outbid his competitors, no matter what the consequences. So far as he is concerned he has said all he can say. He is willing to wait if wait he must.

So much for Baldwin, but the Conservative party is not to be judged altogether by its leader. Probably any party has two characters, the ideal and the real, and in its practices it may be much less impeccable than in its theories.

Tory Party Well Managed.

If Baldwin has done no vote-casting, this essential business of practical politics has not been neglected. Far from it. The Tory party is ably managed. It is realistic. It does favors, it extracts contributions, it is anything but puritanical and high-minded.

The vote-catching was done in the budget. No one who knows England will be horrified by the reduction in public house licenses and the abolition of the betting tax. This is a nation of drinkers and betters. There may be no figures to prove it, but it must be true that more men bet every week on horse races than go to church, and ten times as many go to public houses as go to the morning sermon.

In poor districts, the local "pub" is the Tory club. A Liberal or Labor candidate can not as a rule go there to address constituents. And the talk which come over the bar is nearly always Tory talk. So it has been since time immemorial.

One wonders sometimes why in a country where poor workers are so numerous, the Conservative party should prosper in many working class constituencies. The local publican can answer why. He sets the tone of discussion.

Public House Keepers.

Of late there have been signs of a wane in Tory enthusiasm among public house keepers. Brewers have amalgamated, they have bought out many local pubs, and put hired employes behind the bar. Hired employes tend to be class-conscious, and pubs can now be found where Liberal or Labor candidates have entry. The reduction in licenses may not alter this tendency much, but it has stimulated the enthusiasm of loyal publicans immeasurably.

Brewery influence in the Tory party can be seen in the fact that the brewers were to have rating relief along with the hard-hit industries. This obviously was preposterous, for the brewers are doing famously well in Britain. But it was going to be good electioneering, and Mr. Churchill, the archrealist, was willing to see it through. It happens that the less realistic wing of the party rebelled, and the budget had to take away from brewers in higher licenses for them, as distinct from public house keepers, what is was giving them in rating relief.

Mr. Churchill saw to the needs of publicans and bookmakers, but he also paid attention to the women voters. He was the author of widows' pensions, now he has abolished the tax on tea. That, too, was aimed at the cottage of England. It was like putting so many pennies into every woman's purse to alleviate budgets in homes where a few pennies count. "Bribery," charged the opposition, in attacking the chancellor. Of course it was, but it was legitimate bribery. Philip Snowden was looking forward to the day when he could do it himself. The opposition to this move was not because it was bribery, but because it was going to be effective.

To sum up the Conservatives, they are a hardboiled party led by an honest and cautious idealist. They are pledged to an educational program of the most democratic kind, to an accelerated redistribution of wealth, to the same kind of social reform as the socialists (omitting nationalization).

And yet they are supported by and indebted to brewers, public house keepers and bookmakers. Here is a party in which a Guiness is a minister, one of whose best managers was the late Lord Younger (of Younger's ales), and yet in which that strident temperance reformer and idealist, Lady Astor, can feel herself an intrinsic factor.

occupants of one of the cars were so badly burned they may not recover.

Mrs. Anne Rich, 41, of Newark, is the dead woman. Her husband, Frederick Rich, was driving the car in which she rode, according to police. In the rear seat were William Rich, 51, of Jersey City, a cousin of Frederick, and Frederick's 16-year-old son, Irving. The three were taken to St. James' Hospital, Newark, where it was said they probably would not recover.

Morris Ulman, of Newark, driver of the other car, was held on a technical charge of manslaughter. With him in the car were his wife, Estelle, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Getzoff, of Elizabeth, and a woman friend whose name the police did not learn. Mrs. Ulman suffered burns on the arm. The others were slightly cut and bruised.

Drowned in Car Plunge.

Miami, Fla., May 12 (A.P.).—Mrs. Mabel Graham, of Tampa, was drowned while her husband, C. A. Graham and W. M. North, insurance agents of Tampa escaped with minor injuries when the motor car in which they were riding plunged into Tamiami Canal, 6 miles from Everglades City today, according to a telephone message from Sheriff L. J. Thorp, of Collier County.

The Grahams were returning to Tampa after a visit with relatives in Miami. A coroner's jury declared the accident unavoidable.

Fort Clinton, Ohio, May 12 (A.P.).—Five persons, three of them girls, suffered fractured skulls when their automobiles crashed into two telephone poles here early today. All five live in this vicinity.

The automobile is believed to have skidded on the wet pavement when it struck slippery rails of interburban car tracks.

near Compton, a suburb, shortly after noon today.

The brothers borrowed the plane from Theodore Jenks at Compton Airport for a flight to Long Beach, Calif.

After the take-off, witnesses said, the plane apparently struck a heavy wind. The pilot evidently sought to turn back, they said, but the motor of the plane was seen to stop while in a bank. The plane fell 300 feet, killing both men instantly.

The pilot, a radio repairman, and his brother, a bank teller, lived in Los Angeles.

The weather here was gusty, with winds generally blowing from the north. The plane crashed near the Compton Highway, within view of crowds of motorists on Sunday outings.

Eureka, Kans., May 12 (A.P.).—Kenneth Graham, 25, of Russell, Kans., was killed and Richard Dobbs, 25, of Burden, Kans., was seriously injured in an airplane crash at the Eureka Airport this afternoon. A borrowed plane in which the two men were flying crashed from an altitude of 400 feet and was demolished.

study school methods and advise rather than dictate changes to the States.

Trained supervisors to direct groups of rural schools, a new plan of school finance, better qualified teachers, the fixing of professional standards for instructors by the State rather than by local school boards, and better salaries were considered by Cooper as prerequisite to raising country schools to a par with city institutions.

"We need a unit of administration much larger," he said, "than that served by the one-teacher school. The area of administration should be large enough to support a complete school unit, elementary and secondary. Enough elementary schools should be in the area to warrant employing at least one trained supervisor."

DIED

HUTCHINSON—Departed this life on Saturday, May 11, 1929, EMMETT L., beloved husband of Frances Hutchinson (nee Hough) and beloved son of Annie M. and the late Robert S. Hutchinson and brother of Chester C. Hutchinson.

WALTHER—On Sunday, May 12, 1929, at the residence of her son, Wilhelm J. Walther, 1430 Minnesota avenue southeast, PAULINE ROSALIA, beloved wife of the late Christian Walther.
Funeral from the above residence on Tuesday, May 14, at 2 p. m. Relatives and friends invited. Interment Cedar Hill Cemetery.

WILLIAMS—On Sunday, May 12, at his residence, 1430 W street northwest, JOSEPH, beloved husband of Kate Williams.
Funeral from Saffell's chapel, Fifth and H streets northwest, on Wednesday, May 15, at 9:30 a. m. Requiem high mass at St. Paul's Church at 10 a. m. Interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

POET REWARDED

STEPHEN VINCENT BENET.

PULITZER AWARDS OF YEAR ASSIGNED

Journalism and Letters Prize Winners Include Benet, Author of Poetry.

FIVE SCHOLARSHIPS GIVEN

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—The annual Pulitzer prizes in journalism and letters were announced today by trustees of Columbia University. The journalism prizes were won by persons or newspapers in Chicago, Norfolk, St. Louis and New York.

In the field of letters, Julia Peterkin's "Scarlet Sister Mary" was adjudged the best American novel of the year; Elmer L. Rice's "Street Scene," the original American play best representing the educational value and power of the stage; Fred Albert Shannon's "The Organization and Administration of the Union Army, 1861-1865," the best book on the history of the United States; Burton J. Hendrick's "The Earlier Life and Letters of Walter H. Page," the best American biography teaching patriotic and unselfish services to the people; and Stephen Vincent Benet's "John Brown's Body," the best volume of verse by an American. All the awards in letters carry prizes of $1,000 except that for history, which carries a prize of $2,000.

Reporter Receives $1,000.

The largest journalism prize of $1,000, for the best example of reporters' work during the year, is awarded to Paul Y. Anderson, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch for work which resulted in revealing the disposition of Liberty bonds distributed by the Continental Trading Co. in connection with naval oil leases.

Paul Scott Mowrer, of the Chicago Daily News, is awarded the $500 prize for the best correspondence during the year, and Louis Isaac Jaffe, of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, the $500 prize for the best editorial, which was entitled "An Unspeakable Act of Savagery," and was one of a series on lynching.

Rollin Kirby, of the New York World, gets the $500 prize for the best cartoon, a picture entitled "Tammany," and the New York Evening World is given a $500 gold medal for the most disinterested and meritorius public service. The medal was awarded for the paper's campaign to correct evils in the administration of justice, including the fight to curb "ambulance chasing," support of the "fence" bill and measures to simplify procedure, prevent perjury and eliminate politics from municipal courts.

Other Papers Mentioned.

Honorable mention is given the Brooklyn Daily Eagle for its campaign against "ambulance chasing," which supplemented that of the Evening World; to the Chicago Tribune for work in connection with the primary election, and to the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press for its campaign for conservation of forests.

Traveling scholarships, with a value of $1,800 each, to enable them to pass a year in Europe, were awarded to the following graduates of the school of journalism at Columbia: Helen P. Fairbanks, of New York; Prescott Preese Dennett, of Bangor, Me., and Will Cramer Weng, of Terre Haute, Ind. Alternates are Wayne William Parrish, of Decatur, Ill.; Herbert Anderson Yocom, of Arcata, Calif., and Josephine Russell, of New York.

A $1,500 scholarship for European study was awarded to Carl Brick as the most talented and deserving student of music in America, and a like scholarship to Herbert Sanborn, who was certified by the National Academy of Design as the most promising and deserving art student in the country.

The traveling scholarships in journalism won by Miss Fairbanks, Mr. Dennett and Mr. Weng are awarded annually to graduates of the School of Journalism at Columbia who shall have passed their examinations with the highest honor and are otherwise most deserving, to enable each of them to pass a year in Europe to study the social, political and moral conditions of the people and the character and principles of the European press.

Montgomery Holds Last Season's Session Tonight

The last regular meeting of the Montgomery County Civic Federation before the summer recess will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at the Bethesda School, Wilson lane and Old Georgetown road, Bethesda. Col. A. B. Barber, president, will preside.

It is hoped to clear up all outstanding business at this meeting.

RICHARD W. CARTER, SPORTSMAN, IS DEAD

Virginia Horse-Breeder, 52, Succumbs to Illness After Operation.

RITES TO BE IN CREDNAL

Richard Welby Carter, widely-known Virginia sportsman, died yesterday afternoon in Emergency Hospital, where he had been critically ill since an appendicitis operation several months ago. He was 52 years old.

Mr. Carter delighted in blooded horses and aided in the breeding and early training of many horses famous in the annals of American turfdom. He was in charge of the Belmont Farm, at Leesburg, Va., for nineteen years.

Mr. Carter was born in Crednal, Loudoun County, Va., the son of Col. Richard Welby Carter and Mrs. Sophie de Butts Carter. He received his early education in a private school at Petersburg, Va., returning to his home in his early life to take an active interest in farming and the breeding of horses. He became noted as a horseman.

He is survived by six sisters and one brother. They are Mrs. H. Gordon Moore, of Lynchburg, Va.; Mrs. A. C. Marshall, of Crednal, Va.; Mrs. M. G. Richardson, of Loudoun County, Va.; Mrs. J. M. Tabb, of Middleburg, Va.; Mrs. Paul Whitten, of Northridge, Mass.; Mrs. P. B. Wood, of Baltimore, Md., and John Armistead Carter, of Norfolk, Va.

Although funeral arrangements have not been completed, Mrs. Richardson said services for her brother probably would be held Tuesday morning in Crednal. He was a member of the Episcopal church.

GERMAN INDUSTRIES WARNED BY SCHACHT

on a distribution among themselves of the reparations annuities on a smaller scale than each had hoped.

The situation in these two respects will be set forth in a report by Sir Josiah Stamp, which will be placed before a plenary session on Tuesday. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, chief of the German experts, passed the week-end conferring with leading industrialists of his country. It was now understood that the main feature of the German reservations is a stipulation of Germany's right to demand revision of annuities at the end of ten or fifteen years. Germany feels she should benefit from any revision by the United States of debt funding agreements with the creditors of Germany.

HARMLESS HAY GERM IS BASIS OF NEW FIGHT ON TUBERCULOSIS

flourish, a technique has been evolved for discovering by chemical analysis all the substances of which the germs are made, their proteins, fats and sugars and how these are built.

The aim is to isolate the specific poison and then to find an antidote. Whatever is accomplished is expected to throw new light on the other germ diseases that still are uncontrolled.

This pooled research is sponsored by the National Tuberculosis Association through a special committee on research. Institutions participating are the University of Pennsylvania, Yale, Chicago, Vanderbilt, Cornell, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Johns Hopkins, California and Cincinnati, Parke Davis & Co., H. K. Mulford & Co., Rockefeller Institute, Henry Phipps Institute of Philadelphia, U. S. Hygienic Laboratory of Washington, William H. Maybury Sanitorium of Detroit and the Gaylond Farm Sanitorium of Wallingford, Conn.

A harmless bacillus which lives on timothy hay and is named the timothy bacillus has become an important factor in this fight. The timothy organism has been adopted by the scientists as the laboratory "control." A control in laboratory parlance is a subject so similar to the one under test that it may be used for comparison with the human tubercle bacillus. The timothy germ will produce disease in no known animal. Its value is the guidance it may afford in the search for the all-important factor that is lacking in it, but present in the disease-producing germ.

Other germs, all harmful, belonging to the same family as the timothy bacillus are those that cause leprosy and bone and bird tuberculosis. The work on the timothy bacillus was developed in the Parke-Davis laboratories.

Another accomplishment is the crystallizing of the protein fraction of the tuberculosis bacillus by Dr. Florence B. Seibert, of Sprague Institute, University of Chicago. This has led to purification of the clinical work known as the tuberculin reaction, or skin test.

NO LABOR BUREAUCRACY.

The preliminary inquiry by the Senate committee on manufactures into Southern mill conditions has brought out nothing to warrant the adoption of the pending resolution providing for an investigation by Federal authority. Communism has been at work in the South, stirring up strife and hate, but the whole situation is within the jurisdiction of the States and is not the concern of the United States. No Federal question is involved, and no legislation by Congress can be enacted without encroaching upon the authority of the States.

Labor conditions in the South are not entirely satisfactory. Neither are they satisfactory in Massachusetts, Wisconsin or Montana. They never will be entirely satisfactory. Nevertheless, labor is more remunerative and less arduous in the United States than elsewhere, and there is steady progress toward better conditions, fewer working days, higher pay and an improved standard of living. All this is being accomplished within the field of industry, under State jurisdiction, without the necessity of paternal interference by the Government.

The administration has lately caused it to become known that it is opposed to setting up a Federal bureaucracy to take control of the public school system. The country needs no more bureaucracies in Washington. American labor is free now, but it would not be free if it were under the direction of a Government bureaucracy. The agency set up for the betterment of labor would inevitably become a dictator, telling labor how and when it should work, and how much pay it should receive. In place of agreements between employers and employed there would be a far-off authority ruthlessly enforcing its decrees against both. The first demand of such an authority would be for legislation prohibiting strikes under penalty of fines and imprisonment. It would be shown that the Government could not control the labor situation unless it had power to prevent strikes. Proposals to empower the Government to take over industries in case of strike paralysis would be forthcoming, and Congress would be face to face with the alternative of strengthening the Government grip over the industrial situation or relaxing it altogether.

Government authority over railroad labor disputes, to the extent of compelling arbitration and mediation, is based upon the proposition that in case of necessity the Government will take over and operate the railroads. Is it proposed that the same rule shall apply to the cotton mills of the South, and eventually to all industry? That would be a magnificent surrender to socialism, indeed. If this end is not proposed, then the jurisdiction over industry within the States should be left to the States, and the Government should keep its hands off.

NEW CHINESE REVOLTS.

Civil war has flared forth again in China at a most unfortunate time for the Nationalist government. Kwantung Province has been invaded by the Kwangsi military leaders. Canton was bombarded on Friday and Saturday, and it was necessary to land American Marines from the warship Tulsa to guard the American consulate in Shameen. Foreigners in China are perhaps in no serious danger, and no crisis for the Nanking government can be seen in the present revolt, but it nevertheless indicates a very unsettled state of affairs. Writers who have watched the revolutions of China for years refer to the present outbreak as the "annual spring drive."

As long as these conditions obtain the Nationalist government can not consistently press its demands to the United States and other nations for withdrawal of extraterritorial rights. Theoretically China has been unified under a central government, but actually the country is still under control of the military war lords who choose to agree with Nanking only when it is to their advantage. There is every reason to believe that the government will be able to restore order in the vicinity of Canton, and it has already successfully ended the revolt of Marshal Chang Tsung Chang. But this leaves in the field a number of military leaders who have large followings and whose allegiance is open to question.

The United States will welcome the return of China to the ranks of completely sovereign nations. But any surrender of extraterritorial rights before that country is fully capable of protecting American citizens living in China would embarrass rather than strengthen the existing government.

KEEP THE BUDGET INTACT.

Secretary Stimson's announcement that he will carry recommendations of the State Department before the appropriation committees of Congress as well as before the Budget Bureau is certain to provoke a controversy. He has been making a survey of divisions under his direction and he is convinced that the State Department is in need of more money. He is anxious to have his department reorganized. But other department heads no doubt have the same ambitions, and it is unfair to favor one above another. Under the old system the department chief who presented his case most forcefully got the largest appropriation. Members of the Cabinet were therefore forced to overestimate their needs. The result was discrimination and waste. If the State Department should set a precedent of carrying its appeal for funds directly to Congress the budget system would be seriously weakened.

Indications that some members of the Coolidge Cabinet intended to overstep the budget law last December brought a sharp warning from the President that all departments would be held strictly accountable for their actions. It is a violation of law for a department head or subordinate to carry his appeals for funds directly to Congress. Efforts have been made to revise the budget law, making such appeals legal, but Congress has wisely refrained from thus vitiating the budget system.

No department head is in a position to know the financial needs of the entire administration. Cabinet members naturally view the requirements of their departments as more important than those of other branches of the Government. Since the income of the Government is limited it is essential that the needs and recommendations of each be analyzed by some central agency and submitted to Congress as a unified budget. Any movement which tends to weaken this plan is a step backward which can hardly meet the approval of the President, who, after all, is the chief budget officer.

SIMPLIFIED REFERENDUM LAW.

Pennsylvania has made its referendum law practical by adoption of amendments which simplify the task of expressing an opinion through a ballot. Gov. Fisher has signed a bill providing that questions submitted to electors for a referendum must be printed on separate ballots, and must appear in brief form.

A recent referendum in which the voters were asked to pass on a question couched in 1,500 words furnished the stimulus to reform. Voters are not only confused by lengthy questions, but too often they refuse to read them, either voting blindly or failing to register their opinions at all. The new regulation requires the secretary of the Commonwealth, in State questions, and the county commissioners, in local questions, to frame referendum ballots in brief and unambiguous terms.

The provision for referendum ballots distinct from those used for election of candidates is of no less importance. Interest in the election of officers often overshadows questions of legislation submitted to voters, to the extent that the latter are almost entirely overlooked. These two improvements should commend themselves to other States which make use of the referendum.

RAILROAD INCOME.

In January and February executives of the railroads made public their reports for the operating year concluded December 31, 1928. Generally the reports indicated increased net profits as compared with those of the year preceding. It was generally apparent, however, that increased profits had been earned through increased efficiency and greater economy rather than as a result of increased gross revenues. In practically every instance gross revenues fell off. Comment on the reports praised the carriers for having increased the average train load and train-hour productivity, but it was inclined to ask: "How long can this be continued?" It is apparent that unless the railroads are enabled to earn greater gross revenues they will be very hard pressed.

How are the gross revenues of the roads to be increased? The tendency is all toward decreases of rate and increases of operating costs. The workers are insistent in their demand that pay scales be revised upward. Equipment and operating supplies have not decreased materially in cost since the war. The Interstate Commerce Commission's order that the roads put into effect reduced barge-rail rates and the agreement of the roads to accept rate cuts on export wheat—yet to be considered by the commission—may have a serious effect in reducing gross revenues. There is an insistent demand for lower freight rates and passenger tariffs, and with more or less regularity the commission has found it necessary to reduce rates or fares between one point and another, and on this commodity and that.

With the exception of the barge-rail rates and the reduced rates on export wheat, it seems that most of the factors contributing to increased costs or decreased gross revenues of the roads are permanently fixed. It may be found possible to prevent further pay-scale increases, but it will hardly be found possible to lower those now prevailing. The cost of equipment and operating supplies must follow the general market. Freight rate reductions, to the end of equalizing distribution costs between similarly distant points and upon comparable commodities, must continue to be made.

It is the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to watch developments in connection with the barge-rail rates and the export-grain reductions. It is possible that the wholesale and relatively large reductions will serve to stimulate traffic to the ultimate benefit of the roads. It would be no more than the functioning of natural economic law if this were found to develop. On the other hand, it may be found that the reduced rates will cut into gross revenues so heavily as to constitute a serious menace to the welfare of the roads. Should this occur it may be necessary to take far-reaching action to right matters.

CAUSE OF AIR ACCIDENTS

By W. G. LANDON,
In the New York Times.

In airplane accidents the usual testimony of eyewitnesses is to the effect that the motors stopped and the plane seemed to fall out of control. Even in an investigation, reasons for the accident, beyond attributing it to the motors, are often vague, giving the impression to the public that flying involves unknown and mysterious hazards. As a matter of fact, flight is based on well-known physical laws, and it is only when these laws are broken that a mishap occurs.

Most accidents take place when the landing is forced on account of engine trouble. But engine failure does not preclude a perfectly safe landing. Whenever a crash occurred in the squadron to which I was attached in the Royal Air Force, the flight commander would send in a report to wing headquarters. If the pilot was exonerated from blame, the report was invariably returned with the comment, "I do not concur," followed by an explanation of what the pilot should have done. Theoretically the colonel was right. In any sphere of life, if each person always did the right thing, many accidents could be forestalled.

Two important rules were drummed into us while training. They were: (1) if engine fails soon after leaving ground, put nose of machine down, and do not attempt to turn back to aerodrome. (2) If engine fails at higher altitude, decide on landing place, and stick to decision.

Most accidents in those days, as now, were due to breaking these rules. In order to show the soundness of the advice contained in them, a few first principles will be briefly stated. Flight depends on motion of the airplane through the air, just as a flat stone may be skimmed along water, which supports it, as air does the airplane. Control also depends on motion through the air by means of the rudder, elevator and ailerons, just as a steamboat shooting rapids must keep her engines going to maintain headway and therefore control relative to the water. If the speed of either plane or boat is reduced too much, control is lost.

In landing an airplane, the motor is throttled down or stopped in case of a forced landing, and the motion of the machine through the air is supplied by gravity. A normal glide is at such an angle that a sufficient speed will be maintained for adequate control. When the ground is within a few feet, the line of flight is changed and instead of descending, it becomes nearly parallel with the ground. The increased angle at which the wings meet the air decreases the speed to a point insufficient to support flight and a good landing is made.

In a forced landing the normal glide may be deranged. Taking an example covered by the first rule, an airplane has reached a height of 100 feet and the motors go dead. If the pilot is alert he will immediately put the nose of the machine down and assume the normal gliding angle and thus maintain proper speed for control. If, however, a few moments are lost in attempting to coax the motors, speed is reduced to the point where the machine can no longer fly or be controlled. This is called a stall and when done as a stunt at sufficient altitude the plane will automatically start a nose dive, and after gravity has, in a fall of 300 or 400 feet, imparted sufficient speed, gliding may be again resumed.

If, however, the earth is in the way, before gravity has done its part, it is unpleasant. In an instance where an airplane has attained a little more height before the power fails and the pilot sees unfavorable ground ahead, he decides to turn back to the aerodrome. This is risky for a variety of reasons. Most of us studied the laws of motion in physics. A moving body tends to go in a straight line and resists being turned. This resistance results in a reduction of velocity unless it is counteracted by increasing the angle of descent. This the pilot refrains from doing on account of the proximity of the ground. Thus the speed, of which there was no great margin at the beginning of the crisis, is reduced to the danger point, and before the turn is completed, a partial stall will have taken place with the usual results.

By going straight, control can be maintained, and even with obstructions, such as buildings or trees, in the way, a so-called pancake landing is feasible. This is effected by assuming the ground or obstruction, where the airplane will alight, to be about 20 feet higher than is actually the case. The plane then drops pancake fashion for the last twenty feet and, of course, is badly smashed. But the occupants have a much better chance than they would in a crash due to a stall at 50 feet or more. Another reason against turning back is that of landing with the wind, since it adds to the speed as much as heading into the wind subtracts. In other words, if a plane with a landing speed of 40 miles an hour faces the wind blowing 30 miles an hour, its speed on touching the ground will be 10 miles an hour. But if it should land with the wind the speed would be 70 miles.

Boston Herald: Good news for the depressed sugar industry. The early strawberry States promise nearly 9,000,000 more quarts than a year ago.

Too Active.
Richmond Times-Dispatch: A South Carolinian has been accused of killing his wife, and he probably will be indicted for undue activity on the part of a native-born South Carolinian.

Sure.
Ohio State Journal: When the supply of its product runs ahead of the demand a corporation establishes the five-day week on account of its keen interest in its employes' welfare.

The Sporting Spirit.
Quebec Soleil: Military discipline is much praised as a means of education. But the discipline of the spirit is probably worth a great deal more. And if we must have a substitute, what is wrong with the real sporting spirit? In sport well conducted and well organized, it is just as easy to inculcate courage, honor and loyalty. To learn to keep our tempers in a game, to lose gracefully, to win without boasting, to congratulate a fortunate adversary courteously; these are the moral elements of an exercise which brings health to both body and spirit simultaneously.

Happiness.
Philadelphia Public Ledger: We are no Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, but we have our notions. One of them is that you're happy or you're not and that nothing much can be done about it. Bad mental habits, which produce a good deal of unhappiness, can be corrected, but they seldom are.

Certain things make for serenity of mind. One of them is the knowledge that you've done the best you know—that you've played fair, shot straight, used sense and kept faith with your fellow man. You may not be happy, but if you can square yourself with yourself, you'll be measurably content.

"Spelunculists."
Los Angeles Times: One of the speakers at the convention of the American Philosophical Society spilled a word that came as a bright surprise even to the highbrows of that group. He mentioned some one as being a "spelunculist," and the though conveyed was that a spelunculist is a guy who knows more and more about less and less. We have all met such souls but were a bit puzzled exactly how to bill them. Perhaps these findings will help. In getting at the root of the matter it might be argued that technically a spelunculist would be a troglodyte, or one brought up in the little cave of the winds. But the definition would still fit. The next thing we know some cute sleuth will be discovering a spelunculist or two in the ranks of the Senate.

The Rope to Hang a Man Is Braided by His Ancestors.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

FOR want of a nail in a horse shoe, a kingdom was lost. Doubtless you remember the old story.

Observing the downfall of the kingdom, any good reporter could trace it to the loss of a battle—could trace the loss of the battle to the loss of a leader, the leader's downfall to the loss of his horse, the fall of the horse to the loss of a shoe, the loss of the shoe to the loss of a nail.

Following events backward is a simple matter. And if each event is an inevitable result of one that preceded it, one blessed with great wisdom should see in each present event the entire history of the events that will follow it.

The truth of "foreordination" is obvious, for no happening takes place of itself but only as it is predicted and made inevitable by other happenings that set the stage.

Thus a battle that occurs today was foreordained when the world was young, for the causes that preceded it, each causing each, step by step through the ages, extend in an unbroken chain to the beginning.

Man reads history backward. Who can doubt that an Intelligence capable of creating the universe and its laws can read history yet to be made? Even foolish man, mixing chemicals whose law he knows, can predict the reaction. Is the Creator of the universe less capable?

If event must follow event, and the present was made by the past, and the thing scheduled to happen must happen, why avoid danger or dread the things that threaten destruction?

Does lightning kill a man born to be hanged?

A Buffalo man, caught by the rapids above Niagara, faced death and was rescued. A few days later he died in his bathtub.

Two North Carolina men were in a car that leaped from a ten-foot cliff just in time to be struck by a locomotive, yet neither was hurt.

A news-reel dare devil returned home after risking his life to get a few feet of film and was electrocuted in his bathroom.

A Navy man who flew almost to Honolulu, and was rescued when his plane came down, returned home to fall into a river and die.

A German dying of an incurable disease flew the Atlantic to tempt death. The plane caught afire to make the end more certain. Yet he was rescued and still lives.

One of the most famous automobile racers lived to be run down and killed by a buggy.

A news-reel photographer left his camera and ran to escape a speed car whose driver had lost control. The car struck and killed him, but his camera remained unhurt on its tripod.

What can you say of such things? A flier crushed and broken and burned lives to fly again, and a President's son dies of a blister on his heel.

Doesn't it seem obvious that a man's time comes when it comes, and that nothing can hasten or retard it?

Why, then, take anxious thought for a morrow that was planned in detail by all of the yesterdays?

(Copyright, 1929.)

GLIDING FOR SPORT.

It is good news that the attempt to make gliding popular in this country will be resumed this summer, says the New York Herald Tribune. The American Motorless Aviation Club has persuaded the Rhoen-Rossitten Corporation, of Germany, to send over two of its glider pilots, who will open a school on Cape Cod for those who wish to take up its sport. The response should be commensurate with the thrills which, its devotees aver, can be got from it.

It is a little difficult to plant a new sport in America, for the reason probably that most of us are too busy to spare the time for forms of recreation with which we are not familiar. Gliding also suffers from the handicap of requiring a terrain whose conditions are exceptional. A low range of hills facing a steady pressure of wind which on striking them forms vertical currents is a prerequisite. It is essential also that the surrounding region offer plenty of safe landing places. The German glider pilots who came over here last summer spent a long time searching for a proper theater for their flights before hitting upon Cape Cod. There they were so far successful that Hesselbach, a leading flier of the Darmstadt academic flying group, was on one occasion able to remain aloft in his 300-pound glider for 58 minutes before landing within a few feet of the spot from which he had taken off.

It was the first time that the pilot of a motorless plane in this country had staid up longer than the 9 minutes and 45 seconds scored by Orville Wright at Kitty Hawk in 1911.

Gliding, in the intimate knowledge of air currents and the behavior of plane surfaces it imparts, provides an excellent training for airplane pilots as well as a barrel of fun. Here is a chance for all those who have wished they were birds to stretch their wings.

CHAIN AIRPORTS.

Plans to organize a Nation-wide chain of airports draw attention to a trend in aviation's business development, observes the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Similar chains are already in operation along several air-mail routes, where operators find it advantageous to own their landing fields or have substantial holdings in community airports. The arrangement permits economical administration and a unified method of handling air traffic. It also permits a chain system of flying schools, with courses well planned and indorsed by the reputation of an established flying service. Students prefer such schools, because they promise opportunities for capable men to find work with the organization that trains them.

But the economic factor behind this development is a special condition of air transportation. In the very nature of things, there can be no exclusive franchise or right of way in the air. No business enterprise can own an air lane or airway, either by purchase or governmental enactment. The air is free. But airplanes must sit down sometimes and somewhere, and the organization that controls a chain of landing fields is to a considerable degree in control of air traffic along that route.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Mr. Quillen Was a Little Hard on Writers, Artists and Teachers—They Do Not Agree With His Conclusions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Robert Quillen, who writes articles for The Post, gives practical advice in a recent issue to the youth of the land.

He says in part: "Choose a man's size job that will preserve your self-respect. Enlist in any one of the big organizations—steel, rubber, railroads or what not—and grow up with it. These industrial groups have need of big men, and the big ones are drawn from the ranks." Fine advice for the practical boy.

Mr. Quillen, however, gives very little encouragement to another type of youth of artistic gifts, or of brilliant intellectual mind. Accomplishment through these means he throws to the scrap-heap.

He continues: "Always the trade of the instructor, the player, the musician or the poet has made him a brother to the court-fool—conscious of living by favor, aware of being worthless, and a little bit ashamed of playing the pipes while other men build bridges. Not a writer in the land but wishes he could earn his bread by doing something of greater worth."

A statement may be so unjust and fallacious as to need little protest. The above would seem to come under that head. A jury would not even leave the box. The verdict would probably be that Mr. Quillen is guilty of making a very foolish statement, not warranted by fact or experience.

Mature Conclusions of an Old-Time Visitor—One Law Picked Out for Enforcement and Others Dead Letters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is more than 40 years since I have been favored to see your beautiful city—and many changes have taken place since July, 1883.

After living on both sides of the Mississippi River, I am led to believe, with millions of others, that the eighteenth amendment is one of the greatest blunders ever foisted upon a free Nation. It has apparently done away with the saloon and brought about the bootlegging and hip-pocket era. Where there were hundreds of saloons you have tens of thousands of speakeasies.

A queer sight to see a department organized to enforce one amendment and other amendments allowed to become dead letters.

The eighteenth amendment is unjust, unconstitutional and unenforceable.

Smoke, Grime, Oil, Smut, Dirt Destroying Washington's Beauty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Wake up, Washington! Your beauty is fast disappearing under grime and smoke, such as many a manufacturing town can point the finger to you for allowing.

Your White House will soon find it difficult to keep its name, and the Washington Monument will be stained beyond recovery. I have seen it cleaned once, a perilous and arduous task.

The trees' trunks are becoming coated with the oily, killing smut, smothering their life and beauty.

Wake up, before it is too late!

There Are Those Who Love Latin and Would Have Greek.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing to thank you for the editorial that appeared last Friday, May 3, under the title "Science and the Classics." We who love and teach Latin—alas! there is no Greek in the public schools—and believe in its value for our boys and girls are sometimes close to discouragement, and it is very heartening to find a friend in so influential a position as yours. Tibi maximas gratias agimus.

Too Much Publicity for Sinclair.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The District authorities are right when they stop the newspapers from nagging Harry Sinclair. He is serving his term faithfully, and obeying all jail rules. He is entitled to be left alone. The newspapers will hound a man to death if he becomes notorious or famous. I was insulted by photographers while going into church, because I happened to cross between these pests and one of their victims.

CITIZEN.

ELECTRICITY REPLACING WIND.

Electrical power is rapidly displacing wind power in the industrial life of Holland, says Living Age. An international finance corporation, with a capital of 10,030,000 florins, has just been founded at Amsterdam to finance conversion from windmills to dynamos.

Windmills, however picturesque, can not keep up with Holland's need for production, and Holland, being progressive and enterprising in inverse ratio to her size, is forsaking the windmills that have become almost a symbol of the country of dikes and wooden shoes.

But visitors to Holland who love to see windmills, and artists who love to paint them, need not despair. They will not be banished wholly from the flat, neat landscapes that border the Dutch canals.

Holland, probably more than any other country, realizes that value of the picturesque in attracting tourists. In Flushing and Middleburg, modern towns with trams and hotels, women still wear the traditional Dutch costume with the stiffly starched winged cap, the gold forehead ornaments and the gorgeous old earrings of their great-grandmothers. It is no uncommon sight to see a girl so arrayed swing herself upon a relatively modern bicycle and speed away.

Market days are observed in the open air strictly in the old tradition, with high piles of golden or scarlet cheeses and peasants in puffed sleeves and elaborate aprons lending an air of long ago.

EVENTS OF INTEREST TO SOCIETY

THE President and Mrs. Hoover had as their luncheon guests yesterday Senator and Mrs. William E. Borah and Miss Gertrude B. Lane, of New York.

The President and Mrs. Hoover entertained the following guests at supper last night: Secretary of War and Mrs. Good, Senator Fess, of Ohio; Senator and Mrs. Hebert, of Rhode Island; Senator Townsend, of Delaware; Representative and Mrs. Lehlbach, of New Jersey; Representative McFadden, of Pennsylvania; Representative and Mrs. Beck, of Pennsylvania; Mr. C. THE WALL STREET RESIDENTIAL SUITS.

"A skyscraper residential community is to be established in the Wall street area, New York. The project calls for a $50,000,000 colony of homes in the heart of the financial center of the world."—News item.

Agent—Just think of having a home with an outlook like this. Why, from any window in the house you can get a wonderful view of a millionaire!

Applicant—Not from this little kitchenette window, can you?

Agent—Well, of course, that's a small window. You can only see half a millionaire from there, perhaps, but he's one of the most imposing millionaires in the city.

Applicant (peeringg at a prosperous looking gentleman in an office window nearby)—I can only see his face and neck. That's no view at all.

Agent—He's sitting down now. When he stands up you can see him from the waist up.

Applicant (who has gone to a window in another room)—Oh, this is a much better view.

Agent—I should say it is. From this room you get an unobstructed view of two oil magnates, a steel king and one of the biggest men in the copper industry, right at their desks.

Applicant—Which is the steel king?

Agent (pointing out window)—The one with the white mustache just to the left of that chimney.

Applicant—The one with the big ears?

Agent—No, you're looking at the man between the flagpole and the shaving cream sign.

Applicant—Oh, I see the man you mean. He's at the ice water cooler, a little to the west of that big smokestack.

Agent—Yes.

Applicant—That's splendid. I've always wanted an apartment where I could look out any time and see a steel king.

(They go to the living room.)

Agent—Look! There's the Stock Exchange, the United States Treasury Building, the Standard Oil Building, the offices of Kuhn-Loeb and the House of Morgan!

Applicant—The honest to goodness House of Morgan?

Agent—Positively. And not a thing between it and you. On a clear day you can see Mr. Morgan.

Applicant—Plainly?

Agent—People have said you get the best view of Mr. Morgan from here of any place in the city.

Applicant (gurgling happily)—I'll take the apartment!

WELCOME ISN'T THE WORD.

BETTER ELECTRIFICATION is a part of Better Building

Better elevator service, better lighting, better ventilation, better conveniences for labor-saving are results of better electrification.

Better electrification is dependent upon adequate wiring, outlets, transformers, switches, and other equipment. In planning any structure, whatever its size or type, careful thought should be given to future electrification requirements.

The Westinghouse organization which has contributed so many important developments to industry in general, supplies through an extensive jobber and dealer organization complete electrical equipment for every type of structure from farm homes and cottages to skyscrapers and industrial plants.

YEAR DRY LAW COST PUT AT $936,000,000

Society Against Prohibition Gives "Conservative" Bill After Analysis.

MAY SOON PASS BILLION

The total cost of prohibition yearly to the taxpayers of the United States is fixed at $936,000,000, and a prediction is made that "If Congress and the several States yield to insistent demands for larger appropriations, the total annual cost of prohibition will soon exceed a billion dollars," by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment in a pamphlet, 'Cost of Prohibiton and Your Income Tax," issued yesterday.

These figures, according to the association, are based on "careful and conservative analysis of all official figures and represent almost a year of exhaustive research, and concern only those charges which are passed on to the taxpayer, and does not deal with the economic phases nor the moral and ethical considerations of prohibition."

The pamphlet says in part:

"The probable cost to the taxpayers of this country of the experiment of prohibition is $936,000,000 a year. This sum includes an accurate appraisal of Federal expenditures for enforcement and an adequate but conservative allowance for the loss of Federal and State revenue.

"The lost of Federal and local revenues is by far the largest item and comes to $900,000,000 a year. In this estimate we have allowed for the spread of State prohibition and have assumed that the 1918 Federal taxes would have been maintained. We have also assumed that there would be no consumption in the nineteen States which permitted importation for personal use.

"Federal appropriations for enforcement and the annual loss of Federal revenue total $886,000,000. This sum is slightly in excess of the $882,727,114 paid last year to the Federal Government in personal income taxes.

"After crediting fines collected from prohibition violators, there still remains practically $200,000,000 of direct outlay for Federal enforcement during the first nine years of the prohibition experiment.

"If Congress and the several States yield to insistent demands for larger appropriations, the total annual cost of prohibition will soon exceed $1,000,000,000. In the last session of Congress there was a protracted debate over an additional appropriation of $24,000,000.

THE RETURN OF OLD KING BRADY

Revived by MERLE W. HERSEY.

(Copyright protected. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

A DARK CASE FROM SAN JUAN HILL.

In the first chapter the Bradys discover a murder in the dark case on San Juan Hill to which the U. S. Secret Service Bureau has detailed them. They are called upon by Rufus Rollman, of Jamaica, who explains some interesting facts relating to the case.

CHAPTER II.

Enter the Voodoo Queen.

"WELL," observed Old King Brady, "here we are back on the case of San Juan Hill. If it wasn't Secret Service business I wouldn't touch it. These colored cases are difficult to handle. Better call up Julius, Harry, and ask him if he knows any French-speaking negros on San Juan Hill."

Harry obeyed. Julius informed him that he did not know any personally, but that a friend of his knew a bunch of them living on Sixty-fourth street.

"Tell him it is voodoo business, and to get up on the Hill and keep his ears and eyes open. He is to find the voodoo priestess."

Harry so instructed Julius and the old colored man departed for San Juan Hill posthaste.

Shortly after this Harry went out on other business. He had no more than gone when Alice Montgomery came in. She is the famale member of the firm and a very clever girl—as well as Harry's sweetheart.

"Alice," said Old King Brady, without offering any explanation, "I want you to go into the costume room and disguise as a West Indian quadroon. I want to see what you can do in that line."

Alice paused for a moment, expecting an explanation. None forthcoming, she retired and obeyed without question. When she returned a few minutes later, Old King Brady looked her over approvingly. "Certainly you have hit it exceedingly well," he said.

"And what is it all about?" queried Alice.

Old King Brady explained to her in a few words about the case.

"Do you intend to send me among these San Juan Hill people?" she exclaimed.

"I don't know yet. I'm waiting for a report from Julius, who is now on his way up there. By the way, do you speak the kind of French these Haitians do?"

"The lower class speaks a dialect of its own, but I imagine the richer ones speak good French," replied Alice, who is well known as a linguist.

"Well, we will wait until Julius reports, anyway."

Late in the afternoon Julius arrived, his face wreathed in smiles. "Well, boss, I think I done pretty well!" he exclaimed. "One sure thing dere's a woman on de Hill known as de Voodoo Queen."

"Good!" cried Old King Brady. "Where does she live?"

"Dat I jest didn't 'ceed in 'scoverin'. She keeps mighty close." Julius came a little nearer. "But I found a yaller gal what's promised to help me. She's one of them French niggers."

Old King Brady signaled to Alice to come in. Julius started back in amazement. "Lawsy massy—am dis Miss Alice?" he cried.

"No one else, Julius. Why are you so surprised?" Alice said

"Kayse yo' is de living image of de yaller gal I jes' left in dat air disguise."

Alice laughed. "Thanks for the compliment, Julius."

"Look here, Julius, are you sure Miss Alice bears such a strong resemblance or is it your imagination?" asked Old King Brady.

"I'se dead sure, boss. I kin prove it, too," Julius chuckled. "I 'tended to be dead stuck on that nigger and she gib me her picture."

He produced a photograph cut from a string of ping-pong pictures. Old King Brady studied it long and earnestly, comparing it with Alice's face.

"This picture certainly does resemble Miss Alice to a remarkable degree. What's the name of this girl?"

"Celia Reno, boss."

"Renaud, probably," said Alice, "a common French name."

"Where does this woman live, Julius, and what does she do for a living?"

"She's an artist model, whatebber dat is."

"Well, how did you get acquainted with her and did you tell her you were looking for this Voodoo Queen?"

"A friend of mine interduced me and I told her what I wanted. Was I wrong?"

"Oh, no. What did she know of the woman?"

"Nuthin', but she promised to look her up."

"Who told you there was such a person on San Juan Hill?"

"Three or four fellers I talked with all heard tell of her. She's a wonder at telling fortunes, layin' de cards, an' such like."

"Very good, Julius. Now you take Miss Alice to her and let them work together. See if you can locate a negro named Andrew Jackson Lee, and then come home and get my supper."

It was a proud darky who left the Brady Detective Bureau then. But his pride took a tumble, however, for he came in later to report that he couldn't locate Lee. He had better luck with Alice Montgomery, for she and Celia Renaud took to each other at first sight, and started talking French together.

Bradys Return to the Deserted House.

"And now, Harry," said Old King Brady as they sat at supper, "I propose to visit that deserted house again and put in the night there. It may prove to be a hangout for some of the voodoolsts. Lee may be one of them for all we know."

Accrdingly the Bradys returned to the deserted house after dark. They watched for a while from the street but saw no sign of life. They then went around back, making their way over old tin cans and heaps of ashes. Here they discovered the house had been subjected to further wrecking since they had last seen it. The back door had been wrenched off its hinges and two of the windows had been broken.

"Looks as though some one had been helping himself to second-hand material here," said the old detective.

They entered the building and passed from room to room, finding the same destruction everywhere.

"It would seem like a hopeless case," observed Harry.

"We'll watch until midnight, anyway. Something may happen in the meantime," remarked Old King Brady.

It was cold, lonesome work. At last they decided to sit on the stairs and wait in the dark. Old King Brady ventured to smoke. Along toward 11 o'clock they were rewarded for their vigil. They caught the sound of footsteps at the back door.

"Some one coming, surest thing you know," breathed Harry.

"Back upstairs! Quick!" whispered Old King Brady.

They sneaked into the back room and waited behind the door. Presently they saw a glimmer of light.

"So dis am de place where he died," a woman's voice said in broken English.

"Dis is it," replied a man's voice. "Dunno as yo' kin do any better 'n I've done, but yo' seem to think so."

"De cyards tell me so, man," was the reply, "and de cyards doan lie when I lay dem. Yo' talk too much wif yo' mouf, nigger, dat's what do' do."

"Nigger yo' self. Youse blacker 'n I be a hundred times over, and yo' know it."

"Well, doan less quarrel. Show me de place whar dey done him, and mebbe de spirits 'll tell me whar to look for de papers."

"Spirits nuffin. Yo' ain't make me belieb yo' talk wiv spirits nohow."

"Belieb what yo' like. Take me to de place where dey done him."

"It was just dar in de hall upstairs dat dem Brady 'tectives foun' him."

"It is surely Lee's voice," breathed Harry as the darkies' voices came to them.

The Bradys peered through the crack in the door and could see them coming. Harry was right—it was Lee. The woman with him was very black; in the dim light they could not see her features, but on the middle finger of her left hand they could discern a curious ring which reached from one knuckle to the other.

"So dis am whar he died," said the woman again. "Do you think he hid dem papers up heah?"

"Ah doan t'ink so," replied Lee. "Ah t'ink he hid 'em befo' he come up hyah."

"Come on, den; le's get to work downstairs."

They retreated down the stairs while the Bradys stood in the back room listening.

"Do you think she can be the Voodoo Queen, governor?" asked Harry.

"It is impossible to tell just yet, but I believe she is," replied the old detective.

At length they heard the woman remark that they might as well try on the floor above. Suddenly there was a rush of feet.

"Hyah he am! Give him de rasser!" a voice yelled.

"Back! Yo' fools! I've got a bettah rasser'n yo'all," cried Lee.

"We's two to one—look out fo' yo'sef!" was shouted.

And then the voice of the woman was heard speaking in clear, distinct French.

"What did a he say?" asked Old King Brady in a whisper.

"Depart—I am the Voodoo Queen," Harry replied.

Another chapter in this serial masterpiece is in tomorrow's paper. Don't miss it! Old King Brady is deep in the mystery of San Juan Hill.

How Poisons Injure the Bladder

The kidneys discharge much poison from the body through the urine. Digestive or eliminative disturbances often load the urine with irritating acids and poisons which injure the bladder tissues and cause severe suffering. Mountain Valley Mineral Water from Hot Springs, Ark., is a valuable aid in preventing and treating bladder injuries. Doctors prescribe it: a prominent doctor has said: "There is no better water in the world for ailments of the bladder and kidneys." Phone for a case today. We deliver.

Bishop, on Mexican Mission, Reaches Rome

Mexico City, May 12 (A.P.).—Announcement was made today of the arrival in Rome of Bishop Antonio Guizar Valencia of the State of Chihuahua, to confer with Vatican authorities regarding a rapprochement between the Mexican government and the church.

Bishop Guizar was in Washington recently when Archbishop Ruiz announced willingness on the part of church authorities to cooperate with President Emilio Portes Gil in improving the welfare of the Mexican people. The bishop has been actively engaged for some time in efforts to settle the religious dispute in Mexico.

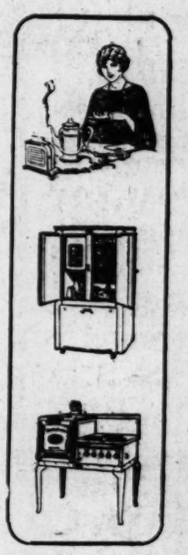
Electricity was used just for lighting

A single light cost 10 cents a night—two lights 20 cents—three lights 30 cents. Then different sizes of lights and the more simple appliances were introduced. The flat rate became obsolete. Meters were installed and charges were based on kilowatt hours used,

NOW—New Rates That Make Additional Electricity Cheaper



An electric company really furnishes two services. First, it generates the electricity you use; second, delivers it to homes and business houses. Under the new Associated Low Energy Rates, the charge for electricity used is low. The cost of making service available is covered by a moderate reservation charge based on the floor area of the home.

Electric appliances have always been economical to operate. The new Associated Low Energy Rates still further reduce the cost of enjoying their convenience.

Our new Annual Report will be sent to those interested.

Sousa Band Is Going on Air Tonight

Famous Leader Will Give His Second Concert of Series; Donizetta Opera Also to Be Broadcast in WRC Program.

The second of the series of radio concerts by Sousa's Band will be broadcast from WRC at 8:30 o'clock tonight. The bandmaster, John Philip Sousa, will open his program with the march he composed this year to celebrate his golden jubilee as a band leader and composer. He also will direct his bandsmen in a performance of five other compositions by himself, besides works of Tschaikowsky, Verdi and Grossman.

The complete program follows:

"The Golden Jubilee," "The American Maid" and "Tales of a Traveler" (Sousa); selection from "La Traviata" (Verdi), vocal solo, Marjorie Moody; "Andante Cantabile" (Tschaikowsky), "King Cotton" (Sousa), "Host of the Warrior" (Grossman) "Balance All and Swing Partners" and "The Bride Elect" (Sousa).

The National Grand Opera Company will sing Donizetti's "La Favorita" at 10 o'clock tonight. The special tabloid version to be broadcast will be produced under direction of Cesare Sodero, maestro of radio grand operas, and will present the following soloists: Devora Nadworney, Julian Oliver, Emil Cote, Steele Jamison and Rosalie Wolf. The story of "La Favorita" is laid in Castille, Spain, and the action takes place about the year 1340.

The "Anvil Chorus" from Verdi's "Il Trovatore" and Schumann's "Traumerei" will be heard as orchestral features of the broadcast by the Voice of Firestone from WRC at 7 o'clock. The intermezzo from Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" is also listed on the same date by the concert orchestra under direction of Hugo Mariani, with selections from the semiclassics to be sung by Franklyn Baur, tenor, and Vaughn de Leath, contralto.

Victor Herbert's "Whispering Willows" and a special salon arrangement of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Hymn to the Sun" will be broadcast by the A & P Gypsies at 7:30 o'clock. The orchestra is led by Harry Horlick.

Other selections include "La Seduction," a tango; medley of old popular songs; "That's An Irish Lullaby," "A Dream," intermezzo from "Jewels of the Madonna" and Herbert's "Cuban Serenade."

The first Fourth of July celebration in the great Northwest, in 1841, when 400 Indians joined the whites in honoring Independence Day, will be depicted in the Empire Builders at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

The Sunshine Quartet, a mixed vocal group, will be featured during the broadcast by Roxy and His Gang at 8:30 o'clock.

WRC will broadcast the Advertising Club program from Wardman Park at 11 o'clock. This entertainment will last an hour.

Ethel Waters, the well-known colored star, will be the feature artist of the program that the Vitaphone jubilee hour will present at 8:30 o'clock from WMAL.

Merle Johnston's saxaphone quartet will be heard during the Ceco Couriers broadcast at 7:30 o'clock. A burlesque of Kipling's "Tommy Atkins" also will be a feature of the program.

Julia Sanderson and Frank Crummit, joint stars of the Panatelas pageant, will sing a duet, "Garden in the Rain," as a feature of the presentation at 9 o'clock. Miss Sanderson will sing "Lonely Little Cinderella" and Mr. Crummit will contribute "For Molly and Me."

David Martin, baritone, will be featured from WOL during the early evening. There will be a program of dinner music, interrupted at 7:11 o'clock for the Amos 'n' Andy broadcast.

Paul M. Lineberger, former Federal judge, will be the speaker in the Sons of the American Revolution program from WJSV at 9 o'clock tonight. A short program will be broadcast by the Rhythm Boys Banjo Quartet, made up of the tenor banjo players from several Washington orchestras.

The favorite music of Miss Vilma Banky, film star, will be heard during the Edison program at 8 o'clock from WBAL.

Blouses at the Peak of the Mode

© VOGUE

BLOUSES know no bounds this season, except that of smartness. Many fabrics, many colors and much style have been impressed in their cause, and, consequently, they have become high fashion.

To the crest of the wave of chic has risen the handkerchief linen blouse. Colored linens are combined with great effect or are used alone The overblouse in the foreground of the illustration uses linen in a Madonna blue tone, one of the season's most flattering colors. It has a small collar with a jabot and fits closely at the hips by means of inverted tucks.

Another version of the jabot blouse, appearing at the left in the illustration, uses crepe de chine for fabric. Here it is collarless, has three jabots and tucks into the skirt. Only the woman who is practically hipless should attempt this fashion, but on her it is supremely chic.

The third blouse in the illustration uses the new lace jersey for fabric in a smartly simple manner. A severely square neckline is softened by a band that ties in a knot at one corner. The knot motif is repeated at each cuff and in the belt, and tucks finish the neckline both in front and back.

Uncle Ray's Corner

A TOURIST party (if we may believe a certain story) was visiting Mount Vesuvius when some one said to an American:

"You have many wonderful things on your continent, but you haven't a smoking volcano like this one!"

An active volcano of Barren Island, with cone 1,800 feet high.

"No," replied the American, "but we have Niagara Falls which could put that volcano out in a hurry!"

That was a clever answer, perhaps, but it would hardly stand the test of truth. I do not believe that a downpour of water could put a volcano out. In fact, the water turning into steam would probably cause more eruptions.

A volcano is a mound around a hole or "vent." When the volcano becomes active, something comes out of the vent—smoke, steam, ashes, lava. Sometimes all those things come out, sometimes only one or two.

Lava is a sort of liquid rock. At least it turns into rock when it cools. Tests have proved that hardened lava contains iron, aluminum, soda, lime and quartz.

One of the mightiest explosions of volcanoes took place on an island near Java. The volcano there bears the name of Krakatoa. The noise of the explosions was heard 150 miles away.

The cloud of smoke which arose when Krakatoa erupted, reached to a mighty height. It is estimated that some of it went up 17 miles.

The explosion blew away a great deal of the island—a cubic mile of solid matter was turned into dust and ashes.

Around Krakatoa, huge waves rose—to a height of 100 feet. The water swept over much of the soil of Java, and 14,000 persons lost their lives. This terrible event took place in the summer of 1883.

What Today Means to You

MAY 13

By MARY BLAKE.

"TAURUS."

IF May 13 is your birthday, the best hours for you today are from 7 a. m. to 9 a. m., from 2 m. to 3:30 p. m. and from 9 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m. and from 5 p. m. to 6 p. m.

The stars today are hidden behind an exceptionally extensive bank of clouds, but the greater their dullness now, the more brilliant will be their effulgence later. Let your expectations penetrate the gloom, for the sun is shining for you just around the corner!

The child born today will have a far-reaching mind, which will grope for constant enlightenment. It would be wrong to try to curb its inquisitiveness. A life of great activity, great successes and few disappointments is predicted for it.

You have a very strong and an independent character. Your individuality will be expressed in all things that you touch. In this respect you possess a spark of genius, inasmuch as you study and accept the teachings and experiences of others, but you are original and unique in their application. Whatever you do, you do in your way, and your way is always different in some respect from that of others.

You are very fond of pioneer work, and you would rather hew your way through the rough than to traverse poorly laid out paths of others. You prefer to meet your problems first hand, and not after they have been messed up by someone else.

It is rather difficult for others to work with you, as you are exacting and somewhat domineering. You are a little too anxious to always have your finger in the pie, and are loth to believe that the pie will be a success unless you do. Until you ease up on the reins, you are always going to have trouble with your coworkers and will be met with a spirit of resentment.

You are not a ready mixer, and you only enjoy the intimate association of those who are interested in your work or hobbies, and they must be your intellectual equals.

Firms Are Booking Space For Big Industrial Show

Manufacturing and commercial firms are already making reservations for space for the fifth industrial exposition under the auspices of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, which will be held in the Washington Auditorium the week of October 21.

Charles W. Darr, president of the Chamber of Commerce, expects this year's industrial exposition to surpass all others and all space is expected to be allotted within two months. The value of local manufactures to be exhibited this year is expected to exceed $100,000,000 as the exposition has been growing each year since 1925, when the value was set at $83,576,826.

Handwriting Talks Slated.

Members of the Teachers Institute are to hear lectures on "Handwriting in Public Schools" by Dr. Frank N. Freeman, University of Chicago, at the Armstrong High School Auditorium at 3:45 p. m. Thursday, and at the Central High School Auditorium at 8 p. m. the same day.

WORK'S BRIDGE

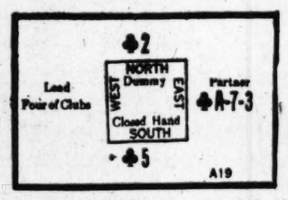
(This article is intended for the Bridge novice.)

AN IMPORTANT point for the partner of a leader to notice when the contract is No Trump and the original lead is a spot card, is whether that card is the lowest that the leader can have or there is a lower card that he may have.

At first thought it would not seem to make any material difference, supposing the card led to be a Trey, whether the partner of the leader could see the Deuce or not, but especially when playing No Trump it really may be quite important for the partner to know whether the leader starts with what must be his lowest card. If he led the Deuce there could be no question about it, and equally there could be no question if he led a card higher than the Deuce and all the cards lower than the one led are in the dummy in the hand of the partner, or played on the first trick.

The reason that it is important for the partner to find out about this is that when the lowest card is led the leader is marked with opening a suit of exactly four cards. When there is a lower card which the leader's partner cannot locate, the leader probably has opened a five-card suit, although it may be possible that the missing card is in the closed hand and that the lead was from four cards after all. The importance of knowing the length of the suit originally led is that it enables the leader's partner to tell whether to try to establish that suit. If it be only a four-carder, it is not apt to make so much difference, but if it be longer than a four-carder, every effort should be made to clear it.

There is one case which turns up more frequently than is generally thought, in which the knowledge that the partner has led from a four-card suit is of vital importance. This can be illustrated in the following way:



Contract No Trump. Should the partner of the leader who has won the first trick on which dummy has played a singleton Deuce, lead back the suit to trick 2?

Answer next Monday.

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN.

MAY 13.

MARIA THERESA, Empress of Germany, Queen of Hungary and Bohemia, and Archduchess of Austria, was born this day, 1717, in Vienna.

Although she is best known for her activity in European politics of the eighteenth century, she was equally great in interior administration. She revived Austrian finance, encouraged agriculture and fostered education.

To revenge herself on Frederick the Great of Prussia, who forced her to give up Silesia, she formed an alliance with Russia, France, Sweden and Saxony. This resulted in the Seven Years' War. The terrible struggle availed Austria nothing and Maria Theresa had to admit Prussia's right in Silesia.

The famous sovereign was especially noted for the nobility of her character. Ten of her sixteen children survived her.

Other noted women born this day include Henrietta Sontag, German singer, 1805, and Effie Shannon, American actress, 1867.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE SOURCE.

Tell me how does beauty grow?
By the spade and rake and hoe,
Every lovely rose is found
Rising out of common ground.

Landscapes and the country side
Are but flowers multiplied,
Every tender touch of grace
Has a source that's commonplace.

Does the master artist find
Paints of a superior kind?
No. For grandeur he must choose
Colors which his fellows use.

So the great souls higher rise
With the strength which life supplies,
And to splendor find their way
Out of ordinary clay.

Dare Interprets the Mode

Elegant simplicity is the keynote of this lovely evening gown, which is fashioned entirely of plain gold lame (lah-may), draped with the utmost artistry. (Courtesy of the Maison Irfe, Paris.)

THE ever-youthful collection of Premet shows an almost complete return to the normal waistline, combined with the very full skirt, even on the sports dress.

This same influence makes itself felt in sport and daytime coats, which up to now have clung to straight lines. These newer models are fairly short, slightly shaped to the waist and very full at the bottom.

This silhouette, combined with the materials used, gives a decidedly quaint note to the collection, which marks a considerable change, for there are alpacas, heavy taffetas, checks and plaids, and other fabrics and patterns reminiscent of those dresses of grandmother's day.

Which is not to say there is anything old-fashioned about the collection. If the multitude of quaint little white collar and cuff effects, flounces and ruffles give a touch of the charm of yesterday, it is equally true that the ingenuity of the reversible dresses, wool on one side and heavy plaid silk on the other, so arranged that they can be converted from the one to the other in a twinkling, gives an efficient note that could only be of today.

• • • •

Why not make your own graduation dress? Yes, you can too make it from our directions! Just send your stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet that tells you how to make it, and see if you can't!

• • • •

And it's such a lovely graduation dress, yet so very practical—having a sweet little way of being a sleeveless party frock when you want it to be, and an afternoon dress when you want it to stop being a party frock!

Ah, eventime, beautiful eventime, what crimes are committed in thy name! There is the tailored lady, she of the rather hard but very chic face—who, chic face and sleek boyish bob to the contrary, dons a frilly taffeta robe de style. There's the sporta-wear type of lovely lady who dons the chiffie-wistfullonish chiffon frock. There is the tall, slender chiffonish type of loveliness that dons the short skirt and mannish sequin jacket—!

A Woman's Age!

That there is any charm in understanding one's age is a mistaken idea that deceives no one, that irritates the average man and amuses every younger woman.

Intelligent women realize this, nor do they try to be that which they so obviously can not be. Instead, they are charmingly that which they can be charmingly.

The fashion letter is a regular part of this service. It appears in the Sunday issue.

Au Revoir!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

CHILDREN AND FIGURE.

DR. RICHARDSON says bearing children should not spoil a woman's figure. In fact, it should improve it, provided she will go about it rightly. No wonder so many women have had contrary experiences. One reason has been that they trusted to binders worn after confinement instead of proper support worn during pregnancy. He calls the binder treatment locking the stable door after the horse has gone. The present-day woman's dress and present-day customs lend themselves to proper habits for the retention of the figure after childbearing.

Women can go almost up to the expected day without attracting any attention. During pregnancy exercise must be kept up. The muscles, and particularly the abdominal muscles, must be kept in good tone. The woman should maintain her social contacts. She must avoid putting on weight. A new fashioned corset must be worn. It should support rather than push down. The market is well supplied with maternity supports.

The breasts should not be strapped or pressed back on the chest wall. If that is done the penalty may be a pendulous breast or, more likely, a flabby one.

Beginning comparatively early the skin of the body should be massaged gently. This is done with the greased hands. After the baby is born the muscles have enough tone to hold the organs in place. Soon the mother should begin to exercise them under her doctor's direction. These exercises can be gone through with while the woman still is in bed. In fact, a woman can use her muscles enough to keep up their tone without making any movement, flexing her limbs or bending her body.

Nor does Dr. Richardson favor binders for the baby. No binders, no bands and no booties, is one of his slogans. A light bandage will hold the cord in place. A binder is not necessary for the purpose. There is no need for the belly-band which babies have worn almost since the beginning of time. The baby will be more comfortable if his body is left freer. His body muscles will get more exercise, and his clothing will furnish sufficient heat. There is no need for booties.

LICE ARE GREGARIOUS.

Mrs. A. J. S. writes: My baby is just seven months old, and as I have to go to business she is left in the care of my mother-in-law during the day. Last night while holding her I was quite horrified to see a louse walking on her head. I immediately gave her head a thorough examination and found three more. Mother said it was due to her blood, as she is, to all appearances, a healthy, full-blooded baby. She is kept very clean, so it can't be from lack of cleanliness.

Is there anything I can do with the baby's diet to prevent this? Her diet consists of 32 ounces of milk, 3 tablespoons of malt sugar, 7 ounces water, an 8-ounce bottle every four hours, 2 tablespoons orange juice, fresh vegetables of some kind once a day, cereal once a day and zwieback, water in between, and I have just started giving her a little custard. Recently she cut through two lower front teeth, and during the night had a little fever which caused her to perspire. I have to keep her covering rather light always, as she perspires very easily, especially around the forehead. She is a very active baby and very solidly built, weighs 22 pounds, is not fat but tall.

REPLY.

Your mother is wrong. Lice are not caused by the condition of her blood.

You are wrong. Lice are not caused by diet. Lice are caught from people who have them. That's the whole story. Your baby is either slightly scurvied or has a slight tendency to rickets if we can judge by the sweating. She needs some cod liver oil and more sunlight. She can have more orange juice, vegetable juices, soups, and cereal.

BURKE WEAKENS AS CHISOX BEAT NATS IN 9TH, 3-2

50,000 Watch Giants-Cubs In 6-6 Tie

Four Homers Figure in Game Ended by Rain in 11th.

Cubs Drop to Second Place as Cardinals Take Lead.

NEW YORK, May 12 (A.P.).—The Giants and the Cubs played a spirited 6-to-6 tie in eleven innings here today as the series ended. Rain and approaching darkness ended the combat, played before a capacity crowd of 50,000.

Home runs played a major part in the battle. Nine of the twelve runs were directly due to four-base pokes. Kiki Cuyler and Hack Wilson hit homers for the Cubs while Mel Ott retaliated for the Giants, the bases being empty on each occasion. Fred Lindstrom then caught one of Art Nehf's benders on the nose in the sixth with two aboard, only to see Gabby Hartnett do the same thing to Carl Hubbell in the next round with Gonzales and English on base. Hartnett was serving as a pinch batsman.

Hornsby's Wild Throw Gives Giants Lead in Seventh.

A wild throw by Hornsby put the Giants ahead again in their own half of the seventh, but the Cubs tied it again in the eighth on Wilson's double, an out and Heathcote's sacrifice fly. Cuyler got three singles in addition to his homer, but had to retire from the game with a wrenched leg.

Jonnard, Bush and Cvengros followed Nehf into the box for the Cubs, while Mays relieved Hubbell.

The failure of the Cubs to win dropped them back into second place. The Cardinals moved to the front by half a game, due to their victory over Brooklyn. Score:

ROGER PECKINPAUGH, Cleveland manager, who was suspended yesterday for protesting an umpire's decision which led to pop-bottle throwing at Cleveland-Philadelphia game Saturday.

LEAGUE HEAD SUSPENDS PECK

Umpire, Hit by Bottle, Suffers Concussion of the Brain.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 12 (A.P.).—Manager Roger Peckinpaugh, of the Cleveland Indians was given a five-day suspension by President E. S. Barnard, of the American League, for his strenuous protests against a decision by Umpire Brick Campbell in yesterday's contest with Philadelphia.

Peckinpaugh disagreed with Campbell's ruling that Lew Fonseca was out for interference during a rally in the eighth inning of the game, which Cleveland lost. A few minutes later the crowd showered the field with pop bottles, and Umpire Ormsby was momentarily knocked unconscious.

It was the first suspension for Peckinpaugh in his nearly 20 years' career as manager and player. Only once had he ever been ejected from a ball game.

Barnard telegraphed the suspension orders to the Cleveland management today after receiving Campbell's report.

Coach Howard Shanks will have charge of the team during Peckinpaugh's absence.

Ormsby, Hit by Bottle, Suffers Concussion of the Brain.

Ormsby tonight was found suffering from concussion of the brain and was placed under the constant care of a physician and nurse.

It also was learned tonight that Joe Boley, Philadelphia shortstop, and Kid Gleason, Philadelphia coach, were struck by the missiles. Boley suffered a cut on the back of his head and Gleason was hit in the small of his back.

Ormsby's condition was not regarded as critical tonight, but Mrs. Ormsby was summoned from her home at Chicago, and Dr. M. H. Castle, the Cleveland Club physician, ordered the umpire to be kept in absolute quiet for several days. He is not expected to be able to return to duty for a week or more.

The umpire suffered a sudden change late last night. He was led from the field semiconscious after being struck yesterday, but apparently recovered in a short time. After he had retired, however, his condition became worse.

TY COBBS GATHER.

All Ty Cobb Junior players, scheduled to compete in the Capital City League, will meet at the Neighborhood House, 470 N street southwest, Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Bobby Jones Finds Skill Missing

Amateur Champion, Off Game, Throws Clubs in Match.

Plans to Play in Both National Tourneys This Season.

By JAMES G. SIBLEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

ATLANTA, Ga., May 12 (U.P.).—Bobby Jones, in the midst of his annual pretournament practice campaign, is experiencing unaccustomed difficulty in regaining his championship golfing form after a delayed start.

The coming summer and fall will see Bobby striking out as usual in defense of his amateur title, and determined to regain the national open mantle now worn by Johnny Farrell. In addition, he plans an assault on the British crown, so effectively defended last Friday by Walter Hagen.

Today, at the Eastlake Country Club, the amateur champion told the United Press he was playing "terrible" golf, and was obviously worried, not only about his putting, but because his iron shots are not getting off right.

During the play today, in a friendly foresome with his father, Dana Belser, and Chick Ridley, the blond, stocky young champion, gave frequent vent to fits of the temperament for which he was famous as a young golfing prodigy fourteen years ago.

Ferocious Scowl Replaces Famous Expression of Poise.

Jones has been playing for a month and a half with as much regularity as the weather permits. The start of his attempt to get back into his swing was delayed somewhat this year by an extended rainy season at the tag end of winter and lapping well over into spring.

He is browned already to a hue resembling a thoroughly baked brick, and seems in tip top physical condition.

But the spectacle of Bobby Jones dashing his club to the ground, a ferocious scowl on his face after an unsatisfying shot, is distinctly at variance with the picture of a master of poise and self-control which has of recent years come to be the public's impression of the man.

On at least a half dozen occasions during his round today over the beautiful Eastlake course Bobby flung his club away when he failed to do with it what he knows he is capable of doing at his best form. And the famous putter, "Calamity Jane," was one of them.

Going to Take Plenty of Golf To Regain Swing, He Says.

In spite of these demonstrations, however, Bobby compiled a card consisting exclusively of threes, fours and fives. This latter figure, however, is an infrequent one at Eastlake course, which he knows as well as his own front yard.

Jones said today he was playing about four days out of every week—twice during the week and on Saturdays and Sundays.

"I need practice and lots of it," he said. "I played hardly at all during the winter, and it's going to take plenty of golf to get back into my swing."

Asked what tournaments he meant to enter this season, Jones replied: "The same as usual—the national open and the amateur."

"Will you compete in the British open next year?"

"Yes, I am planning on it," he said.

Hurls "Calamity Jane," Ace Putter, to Ground.

Bobby was almost invariably short with his putts today, and his judgment of distance was faulty. The champion's drives, however, were long and straight as usual.

Browns Hit Red Sox Hurlers Hard to Win

St. Louis, May 12 (A. P.).—The St. Louis Browns went on a hitting rampage today and lambasted three Boston hurlers for eighteen blows to win the final game of the series, 15 to 3, in seven innings. The game was called before the seventh inning was over because of a downpour of rain.

The Browns fell upon Russell in the first inning for four hits and seven runs before he was sent to the showers. Bayne, who succeeded Russell, was nicked for ten hits before he gave way to Durham in the seventh. Schang and McGowan hit for the circuit, accounting for four runs. Rothrock, Red Sox outfielder, also got a homer. Collins held Boston to six hits.

Seven Brooklyn Errors Aid Cards to 13-7 Win

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 12 (A.P.).—The Cardinals swept their three games in Brooklyn, defeating the Robins in the final clash here today, 13 to 7. Brooklyn played ragged ball, making seven errors and suffered its sixth successive defeat.

After being held to two hits for eight innings by Dove, the Virginia White Sox pitcher, the Cherrydale A. C. Nine staged a six-run rally in the ninth to gain another victory. Harrison pitched well for the victors.

HARVARD SEES —Future Only in— YALE CONTESTS

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

BOSTON, MASS., May 12.—Harvard University is gradually diminishing the importance of all intercollegiate athletic competitions with the single exception of the games with Yale, which eventually will be the only varsity contests, in the present meaning of the phrase, on the Harvard schedule.

Yale appears to be considering the same course, but the withdrawal from general intercollegiate competition can scarcely be said to have begun at New Haven. Harvard is much more definitely committed to this idea. It is the fixed belief of President A. Lawrence Lowell that intercollegiate competition is the mainspring of athletic interest at college. But he is working for the diminution of the intercollegiate commitments of Harvard nevertheless and in time, if the present trend is followed, the Yale games will serve that purpose.

The house plan of Oxford and Cambridge Universities in England, modified to suit the special requirements of Harvard, is the ideal in Harvard athletics now. Oxford and Cambridge each play many intramural contests, house against house within the university, and the Oxford-Cambridge varsity matches are the high points of the athletic year with them.

Harvard Building Up to English Ideal, Sports Director Says

William J. Bingham, athletic director of Harvard and a member of the faculty, has told me that Harvard is building up to that ideal.

Whether the Carnegie Foundation can be said to have suggested the idea to Harvard after its survey of games in the English universities, where the American problem of overemphasis is unknown or negligible, is something to consider. Prof. Howard Savage, of the

Braves Field 57 Chances; Lose to Redlegs, 9 to 3

Boston, May 12 (A.P.).—Cincinnati rushed through to a 9-to-3 victory over the fumbling Braves before a 25,000 Sunday crowd this afternoon. The home warriors made five errors and although they hit Rixey hard, were unable to hit them both safely and in clusters.

Swanson, Allen and Clark made better than ordinary outfield catches and Boston used up four pitchers, Delaney, Leverett, Greenfield and Hearn, in that order. Boston made 25 assists and had a total of 57 chances in a nine-inning game. Victory gave Cincinnati a 2-to-1 edge over the Braves.

KAMM DRIVES HOME DECIDING RUNS WITH DOUBLE OFF HADLEY

Rookie Leaves Game With 2 On; Faber Gives 4 Hits.

Nats, Aided by Errors, Take Lead in 5th; Burke's Loss.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

CHICAGO, Ill., May 12.—For seven innings, Bob Burke, making his 1929 debut as a starting pitcher for the Nats, performed brilliantly against the White Sox here this afternoon and held them scoreless while his mates were registering two runs off of only four hits granted by Urban Faber. The rookie southpaw weakened in the eighth and was yanked in the ninth, which saw the home team rally and come from behind to win, 3 to 2.

It was a two-base blow off Willie Kamm's bat which actually decided the issue, as it came off Irving Hadley, who had come to Burk's relief with men on third and second and one out as a result of pinch-hitter Autry's opening double. Mostil's infield out and Metzler's single. Kamm, by the way, was a trouble maker for the Sox throughout, his deciding blow being his fourth safety of the game and his third of two-base dimensions.

Burke Is Master for Seven Innings, Then Falters.

As a matter of fact, the Nationals did not deserve to win a game on but four hits. Each of their runs was moulded with the need of but one hit and two errors were needed to give them their first. On the other hand, Burke could not have been asked to pitch a better game than he did in the first seven rounds. Twice he pulled out of trouble which would have tried the nerves of a veteran, but he began to falter near the end and was charged with the loss of the game when Hadley, subbing as relief hurler for Fred Marberry who reported ill, was unable to put a quietus on Kamm who worked him to a 3 and 2 count and then landed on a fat one right down his alley.

Kamm was the only White Sox to get more than one safety, while no National could solve the veteran spitballer for more than one. Of the four credited, Judge tripled, Tate doubled and Hayes and Bluege singled, all of these blows coming in different innings. The fielding high lights were a nice running catch by West and a diving one by Judge in the ninth on Mostil's short pop while attempting to sacrifice.

Although Burke granted only three hits during the first six innings it was necessary for him to wriggle out of two tight holes in order to hold the Sox scoreless. This was because two of these White Sox bingles were doubles off Kamm's bat and each opened innings.

Southpaw Pulls Out of Tough Spot in Fourth Frame.

The young southpaw hurled three hitless frames and then Kamm doubled down the third base line and took third

Liska Is Named To Face Browns In Opener Today

Special to The Washington Post.

CHICAGO, May 12.—The Nats are due to leave for St. Louis at midnight, where they will end their first Western invasion of the year with a three-game series against the Browns. In tomorrow's opener of the set, Acting Boss Milan is planning to turn his pitching duties over to Adolph Liska, the young underhand hurler who finally broke into the winning column at Detroit Thursday after having been beaten in two well-pitched games.

Secretary Eddie Eynon today received word from the New York and Philadelphia Clubs giving double-header dates to take care of postponed games during the last visit of the Washington Club to the two cities. Three bargain day bills in a row have been listed—on May 21 and 22 at New York, and on May 23 at Philadelphia. In addition a double shift is listed with the Mackmen on Saturday, May 18, the second day after the Nationals return home.

A glance at the schedule shows that, including the twin bills listed, the Washington Club will battle no less than seventeen consecutive games with either the Yankees or Athletics—a most unusual state of affairs. And, as the Nats' hopes of figuring in the pennant

EASTERN AND BUSINESS IN SERIES GAME TOMORROW

Stenogs Given But Little Chance

Lincoln Park Victory to Pave Way for Title Game With Tech.

Friday's Rivals Evenly Matched; Both Have Sluggers.

TECH and Eastern nines get together next Friday at the Eastern Stadium. The game will be for the championship of the high school baseball series, for which the two teams have battled neck and neck all season.

The Eastern Nine has one more game before Friday. It meets Business tomorrow in a tilt which will be the final for the Stenographers in the series. A win for Eastern, which is practically conceded, will create a tie with Tech for top honors, the Manual Trainers having won all three of their games to date. Eastern has played and won two.

Tech and Eastern are an even match. Both possess heavy hitting and good fielding combinations, while both have capable pitchers. Comparative scores might bring out that Eastern is the stronger at bat, but it can hardly be rated better, as Tech's attack, especially in its last few appearances, has revealed strength not to be denied.

Fisher, McCullough, Ware Leading Eastern Sluggers.

Eastern has a clean-up trio, though, that has done great work in the winning of its games in Fisher, third baseman; McCullough, first baseman, and Ware, center fielder. McCullough, especially, has shone. He has driven in more runs than any other player in the series. Tech's dangerous hitters are Drissel, left fielder; Gorman, first baseman, and Heflin, third baseman. Drissel's consistent slugging, Gorman's terrific heavy hitting and Heflin's timely bingles all have lent power to the Manual Trainers' attack.

Eastern's outfield can be reckoned stronger than Tech's in defensive power. The Lincoln Parkers' trio of Shapiro, Ware and Eagle are a far better fielding combination than Tech's, Drissel, Benner and Spigel. However, the Manual Trainers' infield combination is the better defensively.

Spigel and Ensor are pitchers for Tech against Hanna, of Eastern. Spigel has won two games and Ensor one, while Hanna has hurled victories in both of his games.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT R. COLLYER

BEAUMONT.

Hop over to your nearest corner store and plant a couple smackers on the old beezer. The Headley horse worked a mile in 1:42 3-5 over the Churchill Downs, and it will take a mighty good plater far better than he will meet in the seventh race today to beat him to the judges' stand. MINERVUS is in the same race and is supposed to have a more favorable post position, but don't let that worry you.

In the opening spasm it looks like RIPFIELD, a maiden from the H. P. Headley barn, has all those which have started tied to the mast. The pair from the GOOSE STEWART barn have shown some fast trials, and are well educated to leave the barrier on time.

BEAMING OVER, an overdue good thing from the Lexington session, figures much the best in the second race.

VANDALE is the supposed good thing in the third race and was backed by some wise commissions the last time out. THUNDER GIRL ran a corking good race coming from away back and finishing third.

BLACK BEETLE, racing in the colors of Miss P. B. Bailey, appears a standout in the fourth race. MARCONI making his first start in many months, has worked well and is likely to be close second.

DINNER DANCE, which has been breaking speed records at Lexington, is making his first start in the fifth and has a good chance of beating Barbara, which won her first start.

Over at Aurora, the chief clocker sends FRANK HAWLEY in the fifth race as his special. This trick belongs to J. J. Greely and was bet on on two occasions at Lexington. On first start at Aurora ran second.

In the opening event, SUPER FRANK figures best on his last race. ATCASA has shown some very fast trials and is likely to be in the money.

The Jones faction will be down hook, line and sinker on their crack 2-year-old WINDY ROSS in the third race, which won her last start at New Orleans.

ORMAN appears to be a good thing in the sixth, finishing a bang up second to Golden Singht. More anon.

AUTHS, AZTECS AND DIXIE PIGS WIN LEAGUE GAMES

Edmonds Club Beaten in Feature

Art Stone Nine Beaten 5-1, Despite 3 Hits Off Bladen.

Sanderson Club Routs Press Cards, 28-5; Capitols Bow.

THE Auth, Miller Aztec and Dixie Pig Athletic Club Nines stepped to the fore yesterday as the Capital City League unlimited section race got under way. The former annihilated the aNtional Press Building Cardinals, 28 to 5, while the Aztecs were running up a 16-to-5 advantage over Capital Athletic Club. The Dixie Pigs were extended to gain a 5-to-1 decision over the Edmonds Art Stone Co. Team at Bladensburg.

Other teams entered in this section were unable to make their respective getaways yesterday, but will go into action next Saturday.

The defeat was a hard blow to the Edmonds Nine. Bladen allowed the winners but three hits, two of which were costly doubles, while his mates were gathering nine off the offerings of Adair. The latter was effective in the pinches, however, and managed to keep the opposition from the scoring point.

Auths and Aztecs Display Power With Bats in Victories.

Heavy hitting was responsible for the respective victories of the Auth and Aztec Nines. The latter team collected eighteen hits, Barry and Brown pointing the way with three each. Brown went the route for the winners, yielding ten hits. He kept the opposition in check throughout. Licarione gathered a pair of the losers' safeties.

Bill Sanderson's Auth Nine demonstrated that it will be a powerful title contender in spanking the slants of Howard and Young for 26 safeties.

The Cardinals threw a scare into the team which crowded Georgetown Athletic Club for unlimited laurels last year, when they counted three runs in the first inning. Their lead was short-lived, however, as the Auths chased over a trio in the second, five in the fourth, and followed with eleven and six in the fifth and sixth frames, respectively.

Deuterman and Rhodes divided the mound duties for the winners and were always safely fortified by a big lead. Cotton's home run was the bright spot in the Card attack.

Capital City Midget Teams Meet Tonight

Representatives of all teams entered in the Capital City League midget section are expected to attend a meeting tonight in Room 2 of the District Building. Teams entered in the American Legion series are not included.

Six teams will compete in the latter series. They are: Sam Rices, Tris Speakers, North Capitol Street Savings Bank, Eastern Star, Lionels and Royals. They will represent the Eight and Forty, Spengler, George Washington, Victory, Lincoln and Delano Posts, respectively.

All other midget teams will compete under Capital City League rules. They will make final plans tonight. Player contracts and franchise fees for team entries in both sections of the midget series must be posted with the league secretary by tomorrow night.

ELLA CINDERS—For Wives Only

By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

Ella promised Jim she'd marry him—but it's beginning to be a little complicated
MARRIAGE IS WONDERFUL FOR MARRIED PEOPLE, BUT FOR A SINGLE GIRL, IT'S QUITE A QUESTION! MY LIFE WAS NICELY PUNCTUATED, BUT NOW IT'S ONE BIG QUESTION MARK!
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off., Copyright 1929, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service

I BELIEVE EVERY WOMAN SHOULD HAVE TWO CAREERS—HOME AND HUSBAND! MAYBE I'M WRONG, BUT IF I AM, SO IS HISTORY! CAREERS ARE LIKE TONSILS—IT HURTS TO HAVE THEM, AND YOU'RE MUCH BETTER OFF WITHOUT THEM!

MAYBE SHE'S RIGHT—ANY GIRL WITH BRAINS CAN HAVE A CAREER, BUT IT TAKES A SUPER-WOMAN TO BE A GOOD WIFE! AN INSURANCE POLICY IS GREAT PROTECTION, BUT A MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE PAYS BIGGER BENEFITS!

CLASSIFYING BOARD FINDS M'CARL RULE ON WORKERS SOUND

Members Admit Act Restricts Draft of Employes to Three Bureaus.

REMEDIAL SUGGESTION UNDER CONSIDERATION

Van Leer Tells How System of Using Departmental Aids Grew Up.

Tacitly admitting that from a legal standpoint Comptroller General J. R. McCarl is correct in ruling that the Civil Service Commission, the Bureau of Efficiency and the Bureau of the Budget are the only agencies authorized to furnish personnel for the general staff of the Personnel Classification Board, members of the board yesterday let it be known that they are contemplating recommendations to bring their organization within the letter of the law.

Capt. Carlos C. Van Leer, of the Budget Bureau, and V. G. Croissant, of the Bureau of Efficiency, two of the boards' three members, declared, however, that they are in no way alarmed that the ruling may disrupt their staff or even temporarily impair the functions of the board. Guy Moffett, of the Civil Service Commission, the third member of the board, could not be reached for an opinion last night.

Capt. Van Leer, who is chairman of the board, seemed inclined to greet the ruling as a development that ultimately will result in the board securing a working staff of its own, independent of any other Government department or bureau.

Explains Origin of System.

He pointed out in justification of the present status of the board's working staff, which is comprised of approximately 80 per cent of employes of departments and bureaus other than the three agencies authorized by the law, that the practice since the organization of the board has been to go to other departments when the man wanted could not be found in any of the three agencies authorized.

The law permits other departments to lend the temporary services of experts peculiarly qualified for the work of allocating employes in the classified service, but in many instances the employment has taken on the nature of permanency. In this connection it was pointed out that at the present time the Comptroller General himself is lending one of his employes to the board, and although the employe has worked as an investigator for the classification board for more than a year, he is on the pay roll of the Comptroller General's office.

For classification work Capt. Van Leer said, the longest continuity of service is essential, and in his opinion the board should be permitted to build up a permanent working force of its own.

"I don't know that I have arguments against the comptroller's ruling at this time," Mr. Croissant told The Post last night.

Situation Under Discussion.

He said that he and his colleagues have seriously discussed the situation brought up by the ruling, and that each of them would report and make recommendations to their respective superiors at the Bureau of the Budget, the Bureau of Efficiency and the Civil Service Commission within the next few days.

He and Capt. Van Leer were both reticent as to what recommendations would be made, but it is understood that early action by Congress, creating a separate working staff for the board and transfering all but the strictly temporary experts of the present staff to its pay roll, will be sought.

Considerable doubt exists as to whether the transfer could be accomplished by executive order, and so far as could be learned, the matter has not yet been taken up with the President. It is understood, however, that Brig. Gen. Herbert M. Lord, director of the Budget, will take the entire situation under consideration the early part of this week.

Herbert D. Brown, chief of the Bureau of Efficiency, who sponsored the Personal Classification Board before Congress and is credited with having "sold" it the idea, declined to comment on the comptroller's ruling last night. He said that he preferred to study McCarl's opinion before discussing it, but that he might have a statement to make on it today.

Boy, 3, Killed by Bus; Father Sees Tragedy

While running across the street in front of his home, Thomas L. Greenhow, colored, 3 years old, of 607 L street southeast, was struck by a bus of the Capital Traction Co. and killed instantly yesterday afternoon. The child's father, C. L. Greenhow, saw his son killed, but was powerless to prevent it.

The elder Greenhow was sitting at the window of his home watching the child, when the bus, driven by William L. Aldridge, of 3342 Prospect avenue, going west in L street, struck the child. Police said the bus skidded 20 feet or more when the driver applied the brakes in an effort to stop. Motorman Aldridge was released without charge by order of the coroner's office pending the inquest today.

Woman Injured by Auto; Bottle Falls, Cuts Tires

Mrs. Jesse M. Loving, of 1810 Asten street northwest, was struck down and injured yesterday afternoon at Georgia avenue and Fern street northwest by an automobile said by police to have been operated by Fred J. McClure, 38 years old, of 215 Peabody street northwest. She was treated at Walter Reed Hospital by Lieut. Donnelly, a staff surgeon, for a fracture of the knee, cuts and shock.

Mrs. Loving was carrying a bottle of olives at the time of the accident and when she fell to the pavement the bottle broke, inflicting severe cuts to her hands and puncturing two tires of the automobile.

Police Unable to Find Youth's Body in River

Efforts to recover the body of William E. Cunningham, 24 years old, a student of the Georgetown University Foreign Service School, who was drowned Saturday evening when a canoe in which he and two companions were riding capsized in the rapids half a mile below the Chain Bridge, were virtually given up for the present by harbor police late yesterday, after nearly 24 hours of dragging.

Police said it was nearly impossible to locate the body because of the treacherous rocks in the river. They added they probably would wait for the body to rise to the surface, which should be in two or three days.

NAVY MAN AND PROTEGES USE PARACHUTES

William F. Scott, chief machinist's mate at the Naval Air Station here, the Navy's champion parachute jumper, and his three young proteges, all of whom made practice jumps yesterday from a cabin plane flying 1,500 feet over Logan Field, Baltimore. Left to right—Scott, Paul Bergling and his brother, Joseph Bergling, of 414 Tenth street southeast, and Walker Chapman, of 1612 I street northwest. It was the first time any of the three jumped and the first time Paul Bergling had even been up in an airplane.

HOSPITAL BUILDING INSPECTION TONIGHT

Federal and City Officials to Attend Casualty Unit Dedication.

OPEN AGAIN TOMORROW

Federal and District officials, together with the general public, have been invited to inspect the new building of Casualty Hospital at Eighth street and Massachusetts avenue from 8 to 10 o'clock tonight.

Short talks will be made by Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur and Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, who will be nonor guests with members of the District committee of the Senate and House of Representatives, the District Commissioners and various members of Congress.

An interesting program has been arranged, with music by the U. S. Marine Band. Representative Frederick Zihlman, of the House District committee, will act as chairman.

A second public inspection has been called for 8 to 10 o'clock tomorrow night, with Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of city schools, as chairman and members of Washington civic clubs and several other groups as honor guests. Responses will be made by George M. Whitwell, Rotary Club; Robert McKeever, Lions Club; George W. Offutt, jr., Washington Board of Trade; George H. Winslow, Kiwanis Club; Dr. J. Rozier Biggs, Cosmopolitan Club; Dr. T. J. Prendergast, Almas Temple; Gen. Anton Stephan, Merchants and Manufacturers Association; Herbert Nevius, Optimist Club, and Peter A. Radice, Italian-American Masonic Club. Music will be furnished by the Navy Band.

Directors and members of the board of lady managers will act as guides through the four-story building on both nights.

Woman Arrested As Housebreaker

Neighbor Charges She Was in His Home, Opening Cash Container.

Mrs. Ethel Beckelbaum, 43 years old, of 1233 Shepherd street northwest, was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of housebreaking and placed in the House of Detention under $2,000 bond.

The woman was arrested on the complaint of a neighbor, Julian Goode, of 1231 Shepherd street northwest. Goode told Policeman J. J. Antoine, of the Tenth Precinct, who made the arrest, that he saw Mrs. Becklebaum enter the rear door of his home early yesterday afternoon and open a box in the kitchen in which cash was kept. Goode said the woman dropped the box and fled when he entered the room.

Young Wife Makes Third Effort to Die

Mrs. Irene Gross, 24, Held After Treatment for Cut Wrists.

Mrs. Irene Gross, 24 years old, of 1830 A street southeast, was treated at Gallinger Hospital late yesterday afternoon for cuts to the wrist, said by the police to have been self-inflicted with a butcher knife, in an attempt to take her life.

She was taken to the hospital in the Casualty Hospital ambulance, and after treatment of her injuries, which were not serious, she was held for observation. According to the police, Mrs. Gross has twice before attempted to commit suicide.

While being treated by Dr. F. S. Hockstetter, the young woman is said to have told police that although the three attempts that she has made on her life have been futile, she will succeed on the next. She lives with her mother, Mrs. Mary Woodward, and her 4-year-old daughter, Carrie, and an elderly aunt, who is seriously ill.

She told Policeman J. E. Bennett, of the Fifth Precinct, that her husband, who is now in Baltimore, had "treated her wrong," and that she was tired of living.

In her previous attempts, Mrs. Gross first tried poisoning and then gas, police say.

A. F. of L. Assailed By Textile Workers

Carolina Strikers Send a Letter of Protest to La Follette.

Eleven strikers of the National Textile Workers' Union at Gastonia, N. C., who came to Washington last week in a body to seek congressional investigation of the disturbed textile situation in the Carolinas, last night made public a letter sent to Senator Robert M. La Follette.

The communication, signed by the strikers and Carl Reeve, organizer for the union and leader of the delegation, scored the treatment they received from members of Congress and vigorously attacked the American Federation of Labor's United Textile Workers' Union as a "faker" organization.

In reviewing the strike situation at Gastonia and assailing Gov. O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, for calling out the National Guard there, the letter reiterated that "the Communist party has supported our strike, and we are glad to accept such support and also will accept to membership those of any other political party."

A fire early yesterday morning at 928 Fourteenth street northwest, believed to have been of incendiary origin, was investigated by police of the First Precinct yesterday.

Acting on information given by Mrs. Elmira Doyle, owner of the house, and other occupants, police arrested one man but later released him. The fire caused $150 damage to the four-story dwelling, it was reported.

Special Libraries Units Meet Today

Conference of American Library Association Starts Tonight.

In conjunction with the American Library Association conference opening here tonight at 8 o'clock at the Washington Auditorium, a number of groups of the Special Libraries Association will begin their meeting at 8:15 o'clock in the morning at various places.

Among them are the newspaper group, the civic-social group, commercial-technical group, insurance and museum groups, all meeting in several rooms at the Mayflower Hotel. These groups will continue sessions through Wednesday.

The conference is to continue sessions through Saturday.

There are to be a number of exhibits at the Auditorium, one a striking display of books bound in textiles of varied colors and designs from futuristic motifs to lavender and old lace compositions. Miss Rose Murray, supervisor of binding for the circulation department of the New York Public Library, prepared the exhibit.

IDENTITY OF SUICIDE VICTIM STILL PUZZLE

Police Unable to Find Name of Man Who Leaped Eight Stories.

LAUNDRY MARKS CLEW

The identity of the well-dressed man who early Sunday morning stabbed himself in the neck with a hunting knife, in his room on the eighth floor of the Houston Hotel, and then hurled himself out the window to the concrete sidewalk below, last night remained a mystery.

Police who tried to identify him were puzzled by the note which he wrote and left in his room before making the fatal leap. In the note, addressed to the hotel manager and the coroner, he said he had registered at the hotel under a fictitious name and address. He gave the name of "W. Winchester," of Baltimore, when he registered without baggage, paying for his room in advance shortly after noon on Saturday.

Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt yesterday issued a certificate of death by suicide in the case, but did not fill in the name of the man, leaving the space for the name until positive identification is made.

The possibility that the man actually registered under his real name, or under a name which he had used for some time in the past, loomed yesterday, when a thorough examination of his laundry marks revealed the initials: "W. W. W." stamped on his clothes.

The laundry marks had been half-obliterated by some means, police said. The man had apparently tried to remove the marks to keep his identity unknown. The job of obliterating them was not well done, however, and police and the coroner were able to make out the faded initials, which correspond to the name under which he registered.

Police have broadcast a description of the man and his clothing, in an effort to obtain identification. The police description reads:

"There is at the District of Columbia Morgue an unidentified white man, 28 to 30 years, 5 feet 8, 150 pounds, slender build, dark brown wavy hair, small mustache, wore brown tweed suit with green stripes, brown overcoat, with 'Girard Fashions, Philadelphia, Pa.,' on label, low tan shoes, green polka dot tie, white shirt and collar, size 15, athletic underwear, soft tan hat, size 7, Soronoff & Irving on band (no city given); registered as W. Winchester, of Baltimore, Md. Committed suicide here May 11, by stabbing himself with a dagger and jumping from eighth-story window of Houston Hotel."

41 Planes Arrive And Leave Quickly

Craft En Route to Airport in Ohio for Maneuvers Land in Capital.

Forty-one Army Air Corps planes, ranging from fast pursuit ships to trimotored transports, landed and took off at Bolling Field yesterday morning within a three-hour period. They were from Langley Field and were on their way to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, where they will participate in Air Corps maneuvers, beginning Wednesday.

An impressive sight, which brought many motorists to the field from Washington, was the arrival of fifteen twin-motored bombers of the Second Bombardment Group in close formation. They included eight new LB-7 types and seven LB-5's, and were commanded by Maj. Hugh Knerr.

First to arrive were eight P-1 type pursuit planes of the Air Corps Tactical School Langley Field. They were followed by thirteen Curtiss Falcons, eight of which were observation type planes and six attack planes. One old Fokker observation plane, two trimotored Fokker transports, one of which was the Question Mark, and a Douglass transport came in and departed at intervals. The planes from the tactical school, in flights of three each, were under command of Maj. Walter H. Frank.

"Slander," Coad's Answer To "County Is Rum Base"

Baltimore, Md., May 12 (A.P.).—Branding it "another instance wherein the board is guilty of gross and slanderous falsehood," State Senator J. Allan Coad, of St. Mary's County, today entered a vigorous denial that Maryland or St. Mary's County was the headquarters for rum runners who invade the District of Columbia in "smoke-screened, high-powered cars." The charge was made by the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals in the Clipsheet.

Senator Coad declared that St. Mary's County was "no more the headquarters of rum runners than any other section of Maryland or of the Nation, so far as that is concerned."

The Clipsheet, according to Senator Coad, said that rum runners made St. Mary's County their headquarters to "invade the District of Columbia, using smoke screens and other war materials in their fast cars, killing and wounding citizens and officers of the law, under the practical protection of the political policy of the State administration."

MOTHERS' MEMORIAL TRACT IS POSSESSED IN SYLVAN CEREMONY

Universal Alliance Accepts 5 Acres of Land From Capt. Calhoun.

ERECTION OF INITIAL BUILDING IS ASSURED

Senator Copeland Praises Move for Honoring All Mothers.

Possession of a five-acre tract of land in Braemar Forest, at the head of Rock Creek Park, on which a Mothers' Memorial will be erected, was taken yesterday by the Universal Alliance, 1389 National Press Building, amid fitting Mother's Day ceremonies in which Capt. C. C. Calhoun, the donor of the tract, paid tribute to the great women of the past.

In presenting this tract to the alliance for the purpose of erecting a Mothers' Memorial, Capt. Calhoun told the crowd assembled for the exercises that his donation had been prompted by a desire to see built thereon a building or buildings to commemorate the services of mothers and great women of the past as an inspiration to the mothers and great women of the future of all nationalities and races.

Tribute to His Mother.

The gift, said Capt. Calhoun, was also in the nature of a tribute to his mother, Mrs. Margaret Bosley Calhoun, and his wife's mother, Mrs. Josephine Marr Breaux.

Ceremonies began at 3:30 o'clock with Boy Scouts in each of the four corners of the lot bugling to call the audience to attention. Acceptance of the site was made by Mrs. Clarence Crittenden Calhoun, president of the Universal Alliance.

On top a pyramid of limestone in the center of the tract the American flag was raised. An anonymous donor has contributed such limestone material in sufficient quantities to assure the erection of the first of the Mother's Memorial buildings.

Copeland Speaks.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, who is chairman of the child welfare section of the Universal Alliance, praised the purpose of the memorial and declared that such action as was taken yesterday was a tardy tribute to the greatest influence for good in the world.

Other speakers on the program were the Rev. J. Hilliman Hollister, pastor of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Father Thomas G. Smyth, rector of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament; the Rev. Henry T. Cooke, rector of All Saints Church, Chevy Chase, and the Rev. F. C. Reynolds, also of Chevy Chase. Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Dr. W. L. Darby, of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Card Party to Benefit Church in Mt. Rainier

Another step toward relief of the indebtedness of the new church and school at St. James' Catholic Church, Mount Rainier, Md., will be taken tonight, when the women of the parish hold a sodality card party in the church auditorium.

Mrs. Grace E. Ellers is chairman of the committee in charge. The hostesses are Leona Almond, Margaret Brown, Catherine Campbell, Pauline Grieshaber, Agnes Jackson, Marie Keys, Catherine Magill, Agnes Mohun, Audrey Speaks and Helen West.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

METROPOLITAN

"THE DESERT SONG." The first screen operetta, adapted from the stage success by Harbach, Hammerstein and Mandel, with music by Sigmund Romberg, featuring John Boles and Carlotta King. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

While the screen possesses an exaggerated faculty for emphasizing the deficiencies in logic and realistic action that have always been characteristic of musical comedy and operetta, it must be conceded by any thoughtful observer that in producing the first light musical work ever brought to the silver sheet the Warner Brothers have done an extraordinarily fine job. The visual aspects of this exceptional singing picture are as notable as the perfection with which the solo voices and ensembles have been recorded. Several of the more impressive desert scenes have been executed in natural color, to the considerable enhancement of their beauty, and the music has lost nothing of its stage effectiveness, save possibly in an occasional ensemble when the definition is not quite all that it should be.

"The Desert Song," in its photoplay version, is interpreted by a cast that would bring distinction to any comparable vehicle on the stage. The principals, by some miracle of casting, photograph as well as they sing. John Boles is thoroughly in his element in the role of the Red Shadow, having originally come to the pictures from the light operatic stage. A splendid barytone voice and the dramatic intelligence to do justice to an interesting dual character equip him admirably to score his greatest individual screen triumph in his present part. Carlotta King, a newcomer to the studios, acquits herself with equal credit in the soprano role of Margot. Although a trifle shrill at times, her voice is wholly adequate to the exacting demands of Mr. Romberg's excellent score and blends well with Mr. Boles' in the duets that are among the most delightful numbers the piece contains. Robert F. Guzman, cast as Sid El Kar, and Jack Pratt, the imposing Pasha, add tenor and bass, respectively, of genuinely superlative quality. The mixed choruses and the rousing male Riff song are well sung, and despite an infrequent blur more skilfully recorded than might be expected.

The nonsinging comedy roles are happily intrusted to Johnny Arthur and Louise Fazenda with unfailingly comic results and Otto Hoffman contributes an amusing character bit as Hasse. John Miljan is the rival lover, Capt. Paul Fontaine; Edward Martindel, and Gen. Birabeau and Myrna Loy the seductive and vengeful dancing girl, Azuri. All have been heard in earlier talking subjects and register handsomely here. Marie Wells does well with a soprano part of secondary importance as Clementine.

The locale of the story, a French military post at the edge of the Sahara with short excursions to the palace of the pasha, lends itself readily to striking spectacular effects in both settings and costumes.

It is not my intention to give the impression that this first of the picturized operettas is perfect, for it is not. But it does seem to me that it marks a vast step along the way of artistic advancement for the audible screen and that its most obvious defects are those inherent in the musical comedy form—to which the Warners have rigidly adhered—and not conspicuously the fault of the cinema.

The length of the feature has caused all supplementary attractions to be omitted and I should construe it as a further tribute to "The Desert Song" that they are not missed.

COLUMBIA

"THE LETTER." Paramount all-talking picture, produced by Monta Bell and directed by Jean de Limur, from a stage play by W. Somerset Maugham. Starring Jeanne Eagles, supported by O. P. Heggie. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by C. Ransom.

One of the things that must be taken into account in the voracious advance of these talkie things is the spread of the theater's prevailing mode of bitter sophistication into the broader and more popular field of the movies. What effect it will have, how far it will go, whether 50 cents can be as hard-boiled as $3, these are problems for the social moralist. If they want a specimen for study, here it is.

"The Letter" is a short and simple, but hectic, tale in which Jeanne Eagles devotes her splendid talent to sounding the depths of feminine perfidy. One of the conventional doctrines of the soured school of drama is that whites go rotten in the tropics; although this might seem to involve an admission that they retain some virtue at home. W. Somerset Maugham in this play pursues this somewhat overhandled theme by depicting the unmoral emotional tragedy of the wife of a British rubber planetr near Singapore.

When her trusting husband goes to town she writes a note summoning her lover, and when he spurns and insults her she kills him in a jealous frenzy. On trial for her life, she tells the most perfect and plausible of lying defenses. Then it becomes necessary to buy back her letter from the Chinese woman for whom her lover had turned away from her. The outcome is the tragedy, not of death, but of a hopelessly unhappy and embittered future.

The film is a beautifully acted and skillfully directed piece of moral fungus. The four chief characters are British, the kind who are supposed, in the reputed scheme of the world, to carry traditions of civilization among outer and lesser breeds. Apparently the story takes its point from the utter loss of any sense of honor, truth or loyalty among these people, or some of them. The woman's excuse is her enforced life in outlandish surroundings. The background of Singapore, with its welter of peoples, sinister as well as picturesque, its degraded resorts and unmoral atmosphere is appropriately pictured. A symbolic battle between a cobra and a mongoose, already familiar to Washington, is one of the points of special interest.

Miss Eagels' subtle emotional playing is well worth the attendance, and she is in the forefront throughout. O. P. Heggie, famed as an actor of oddities, has a "straight" part as the woman's attorney, acting with fine restraint and sympathy. Reginald Owen and Herbert Marshall are excellent as the husband and lover.

In second place on the program is a comedy with Charlie Chase, which has its reasonably ludicrous moments. There are two singing Movietone numbers, one by Kellar Sisters and Lynch, the other by Van and Schenk, some excellent news pictures and a colored film appropriate to the week that includes Mother's Day.

RIALTO

"SHOW BOAT." From Edna Ferber's novel and Ziegfeld's stage play, produced by Universal, with sound and dialogue. Starring Laura La Plante and Joseph Schildkraut. Reviewed Sunday afternoon (fourth week) by J. F. Brady.

Just as the tune of one of its songs, "Show Boat" keeps rolling along. From the crowds which still pack the Rialto one would think the picture was still in its premiere week. There is that something about it that holds its audience and increases its popularity.

The singing of Laura La Plante, the songs and settings in the prologue, and from that the characteristic swing into the picture itself, bring out the merits of "Show Boat" as a novel production of the studio. Universal has achieved a success in the picturization of Ziegfeld's stage production, with the advantages of being able to introduce more varied settings.

Laura La Plante and Joseph Schildkraut have given us in this picture fine interpretations of their characters. Alma Rubens has only a minor part, but in her moments, especially with the child in the cabin, does remarkably good acting. Otis Harlan as the father of Magnolia (Miss La Plante) and the captain of the show boat, could hardly be better.

In "Show Boat" we are shown one of the first attempts to put over an approximation of a massive stage show, and the attempt merits approval. The few drags and detonations in the sound reproduction are unnoticed under the spell of the picture.

LITTLE THEATER

"SHIRAZ." A British Instructional Films production, with an all-Hindu cast. Directed by Franz Osten and V. Peers. Reviewed Sunday night by W. A. Whitney.

As a fitting tribute to an excellent photodrama, "Shiraz" returns for a second engagement.

Produced, we are told, entirely without the aid of studio sets or artificial lighting, this tense drama of love and devotion to a lost cause leaves nothing to be desired for stark, honest and vivid picturization of the story behind the erection of the world's most beautiful building—the Taj Mahal.

Himansu Rai carries the difficult role of Shiraz in a most convincing manner, as does Charu Roy, the other male lead, in whose charge the role of Prince Khurram is justifiably entrusted. Enakshi Ram Rau excellently carries the role of Selima, and Setti Devi the role of Dalia, the emperor's daughter and Selima's quasi-nemesis.

These pivotal characters are very forcefully played with an honesty equaled only by the excellent handling of the mob scenes. Although the presence of a director is occasionally felt, the faithfulness and conviction with which the whole drama is done raises "Shiraz" to the rank of an epic in the fullest and truest sense of that much-maligned term.

A revival of Charlie Chaplin's "The Vagabond," filled with the poignant tragedy of his early productions; a release of Paramount News, and the delightful "Hindu Song" of Bemberg, charmingly played by the Little Theater Trio, complete a program of unusual excellence.

PALACE

"THE TRIAL OF MARY DUGAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 100 per cent talking picture, adapted from the stage play by Bayard Veiller, with Norma Shearer, Raymond Hackett, H. B. Warner and Lewis S. Stone. Directed by the author. Reviewed Saturday night.

To date there has been no better all-talking picture than this tense and vivid adaptation of one of Mr. Veiller's more pungent melodramas. It is so very excellent, in fact, that it upsets many of the pet theories of those who tenaciously advocate the silent photoplay, most notably the one that a constantly shifting scene is an essential of screen entertainment. The greater part of the action of "The Trial of Mary Dugan," as the title correctly implies, takes place in a courtroom barren of any picturesque variety whatsoever. The scenes here depicted are nothing less than continuously and tautly engrossing, although they consist of little else than the cross-examination of witnesses.

This, I presume, may be taken as evidence that a good stage play affords the best material for a good talking film and that an author makes his own best director. There may also be something significant in the fact that all but one of the principals cast in the roles of greatest importance are graduates of the speaking stage. Lest that be taken to mean too much, I hasten to add that the one exception is the star of the picture—by right of performance, as well as in name—Norma Shearer. Miss Shearer by virtue of a superb portrayal of an exhausting role need have no fear of her future in the articulate celluloids.

In this drama of murder and its legal aftermath, Mr. Veiller has fashioned his story somewhat after the pattern of "Madam X," except that he has made his young attorney the brother, instead of the son, of the woman on trial for her life. Jimmy Dugan, dissatisfied with the conduct of his sister's defense, causes the withdrawal of her counsel and, without previous court experience, assumes the task of proving her innocence himself. It is this role that brings Raymond Hackett, a young actor of fine ability and voice, to the screen. His war of wits is waged with H. B. Warner, cast as the district attorney, who has never done a more impressive piece of work for the cameras than this. Lewis S. Stone gains much by audibil[illegible] in the part of the ousted attorney, [illegible] surprisingly proves to have been [illegible] murderer, and Wilfred North is no l[illegible] convincing as the judge. Other clev[illegible] drawn characters are played by Lilyan Tashman, Olive Tell, Adrienne D'Ambricourt, a delightfully comic French maid; T. DeWitt Jennings, Mary Doran, Landers Stevens, Myra Hampton, a rattle-brained chorus girl; Mary Dorne and Westcott Clarke, captain of police.

The unusual length of the feature has resulted in a curtailment of C. A. Niggemeyer's "Bright Lights" revue until it offers scant opportunity for Herbert Rawlinson, the new master of ceremonies, to display his wares. Impeccable in smart evening clothes, he preceded what little "mastering" was to be done by a brief and witty monologue, delivered in the glib and suave manner of a thoroughly schooled actor, and led the band with authority and precision.

Others on the stage include Cowan and Gray, acrobatic dancers; Carroll and Gorman, two boys and a miniature piano; Ivan Bankhoff and Beth Cannon, novelty dancers; Fifi D'Orsay, French chanteuse, and the Gamby-Hale girls and the Dave Gould Boys, numbering twelve and six, respectively.

The M.G.M. News is the only added screen offering. N. B. B.

FOX

"ONE STOLEN NIGHT." Warner Bros. sound-picture, with dialogue sequences, featuring Betty Bronson and William Collier, jr. Directed by Scott R. Dunlap. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

This loosely-knit narrative of a traveling wagon show in a little Algerian town at the edge of the desert I suspect of having been made among the earliest of the Warner Brothers' partially talking pictures. It seems to partake of the lethargic movement that was typical of the days when all of the tinkering was being done with the sound devices and not much care exercised in shaping a story so long as its conversations became intermittently audible. For once, I am reconciled to this sporadic dialogue. Such speeches as came to my ear yesterday seemed none too pregnant with dramatic fire, although there were frequent situations in which verbal sparks should have flown.

The motley crew making up the troupe wandering about northern Africa in the Blossom's modest caravan were of all nationalities, including the daughter of a great French dancer and the son of a British army officer. These two, impersonated by Betty Bronson and William Collier, jr., quite naturally fell in love. Papa Blossom, just a big no-good bum, was forever ogling the women in his company and Mamma Blossom, a high-strung Parisian whipcracker, appeased her raging jealousy by exercising her profession upon the backs of her husband's victims.

All this, it seemed to me, had precious little to do with getting the little dancer married to the young deserter, taking the rap for a brother's indiscretion with the commissary funds. Things brightened up a bit, however, when Mamma Blossom conceived the noble notion of selling pretty little Jeanne to the pasha. The last I noticed, after the camels and the fight at the desert palace, Mr. Collier and Miss Bronson had picked themselves one of the smaller of the oases and seemed to be getting along all right with their gardening.

On the stage, John Irving Fisher, master of ceremonies, does much in a brisk and brittle manner to enliven the "syncopation" revue, in which three of the acts are silent, and along toward the end stops the show—or did yesterday afternoon—with the best pianologue he has offered. A similar hit was scored by Evans and Perez, pole bal[illegible] Sydell and "Spotty," thanks to "Spotty," the world's most patient fox terrier acrobat. Ruth Mayon, a shapely young acrobatic dancer, and Le Van and Bernie, hurricane hoofers, provide the stepping.

The Jazzmanians, led by Samuel Korman, scored a knockout with a skillful transcription of "That Precious Little Thing Called Love" into the musical idiom of many nations—arranged by Mr. Elmer Wilson, one of the saxophonists—and a string sextet, "Mother," in honor of the day, while the Foxettes offered a unique "daffydill dance" with the aid of total darkness and iridescent costumes, appearing later in not much of any!

An interesting Movietone News and millinery style reel in natural color are the garnishments. N. B. B.

EARLE

"WHY BE GOOD?" First National sound-picture, starring Colleen Moore, supported by Neil Hamilton. Directed by William A. Seiter. Reviewed Saturday night by Mary Porter Russell.

There is a high moral lesson for jazz-mad little sales girls in this working girl issue of the flaming youth series. Why be good? Why, because the millionaire boss' son and heir will never marry you otherwise. Of course, he probably won't marry you anyhow, but it will just be for the sad reason that you live in real life instead of reel life and because you are not Colleen Moore. Pert Kelly—that's Colleen—was a good girl, and Pert got her man.

There seemed to be a slight conflict of opinion during the course of the film as to just what made a good girl a good girl. Pert's father was a narrow-minded, suspicious old prude who objected when Pert came home at 3 o'clock in the morning with a strange young man she had picked up at "The Boiler Cabaret," and seemed desirous of lingering over the farewells in her innocent way during the remaining hours of the speeding night. He didn't even want her to accept a trunkful of clothes from the generous youth the next day. He was as unreasonable as that!

The boy's father, too, was of a cruelly misunderstanding nature. "Son," he said, "I'm not a snob. I don't mind the difference in station. But that girl has seen life." It was stupid of him to found his opinion of her on the ancient theory that a girl may be judged by her actions—stupid and unfair.

Whether you fancy the story or not there's Colleen with all her tricks out in full force and with some dance steps as hot as the cabarets that form the background of the picture.

It will be seen that the theme of hidden virtue is not unlike that of "Dancing Daughters." But there the similarity ends. This one is a Cinderella tale set to jazz, with Cinderella becoming slightly soiled in the process. It will be popular with those who like their night clubs or their Colleen, regardless.

In addition to Neil Hamilton, who leads the support, there are Bodil Rosing as the wearyingly sweet mother; John Sainpolis and Edward Martindel as the fathers and Louis Natheaux as the dance hall sheik.

A moderately amusing talking comedy called "Gossip" heads the added attractions, which also include a news-reel and an orchestral overture in which Mr. Breeskin again features the two young violinists who team so well together, whether you look or listen.

Girl, 9, Struck by Auto, Succumbs to Injuries

Blanche Hawkins, colored, 9 years old, of 1112 Second street southeast, who was struck down and injured last Sunday at New Jersey avenue and M street southeast, died yesterday at Casualty Hospital.

The child was struck down by an automobile operated by George Baker, 31 years old, of Suitland, Md., according to the police. Baker was arrested several blocks from the scene of the accident and was charged by Fifth Precinct police with leaving after injuring the girl. He later was released, but was rearrested last night and is being held pending a coroner's inquest.

Inquest Today in Fatal Elevator-Shaft Plunge

An inquest into the death of Mme. Marie Piot, 25 years old, wife of Andre Piot, coding officer at the French Embassy, who was fatally injured, together with her 11-month-old baby, last Wednesday in a fall down the elevator shaft at the Ritz Apartments, 1631 Euclid street northwest, where the Piots lived, will be held at 11:30 o'clock today, Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt announced yesterday.

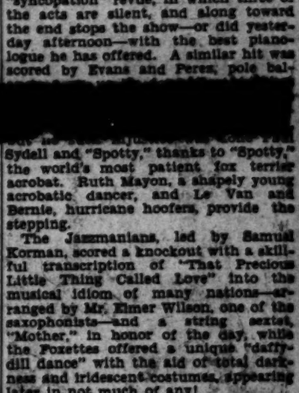
Man Who Held Up Motorist Hunted

Lone Robber Forced Driver to Isolated Place; Took $23 and Auto.

Police yesterday pressed the search, begun early yesterday morning, for the unidentified man, who forced Nathan Lovelee, of 4906 Ninth street northwest, to drive his own car to an isolated spot in Rock Creek Park, where the lone robber took from Lovelee a billfold containing $23 in currency and then drove off in Lovelee's automobile, forcing the latter to walk back to the city in the dark.

The robber-Lovelee told police of the Fourteenth Precinct, approached the automobile and drew a pistol. He climbed into the automobile, forcing Lovelee at pistol point to drive at his direction to the quiet spot in the park, where he proceeded to divest Lovelee of the automobile and money.

Police found the automobile abandoned just outside the park. They have broadcast a lookout for the hold-up man.



The Sure Road to Better Health and Safe Reduction

Good looks, good health and a slender figure are today largely within one's own control.

Proof of this and more lies in a short, free trial of the Battle Creek Oscillo-Manipulator, made right in the privacy of your own home.

Fifteen minutes a day of deep, penetrating manipulation (not nerve jarring vibration) will arouse sluggish organs, enliven drowsy, lazy muscles, soothe, relax and invigorate the entire body. Faulty digestion with its long train of ills gives way to normal bodily function, the glow of health returns.

And weight . . . that bugaboo of our modern existence with its easy living, actually becomes a matter of definite control . . . you reduce surely, safely, as and where you will.

But the first step towards any coveted goal requires action, so today . . . now . . . why not phone for descriptive booklet? Or better yet, order your Manipulator sent out on trial . . . without obligation of any kind we promise.
